The First National story is one of top quality foods in exciting variety, offered at the lowest possible prices every shopping day of the year. We try to tell it directly, honestly, dramatically if possible. But First National traditionally avoids extravagant or misleading claims, both in our store merchandising and in all our advertising media. The fact is, actually, that this reputation for advertising and merchandising integrity over the years has been good for business — as the loyalty of our huge customer family would indicate.

The UNIVERSITY on the HEIGHTS

Rev. Charles F. Donovan, S.J.
Academic Vice-President

AMONG educational institutions throughout the world the term university carries the highest prestige. It evokes an image of energetic scholarship, of intellectual ferment and progress. In the United States there are feeble institutions of higher learning that bear the name university and do not merit it. By a paradox Boston College is a university and can proudly point to its credentials for using the title, although we do not use it.

What is the difference between a college and a university? One obvious difference is complexity of structure. The non-university college is usually described as a single-purpose institution. It is devoted exclusively to the four-year undergraduate general education of its students. It may and usually does offer substantial preprofessional course sequences; but it does not consider itself a professional school. In contrast a university is comprised of many colleges, one of which is the traditional college of liberal arts, the others being devoted to various professions. Thus there is an organizational difference between a university and a college. While the charter of Boston College gave us the right to become a university in this sense of offering courses and degrees in several of the professions, we cannot say that we became a university in reality until the founding of the Law School, the School of Social Work, the College of Business Administration, the School of Nursing and the School of Education.

However, the presence on a campus of separate schools with diversified aims and professional interests is not the most significant measure of whether an institution is a true university. Not professional education but graduate education or, rather, the intellectual spirit symbolized and promoted by Graduate Schools is the distinguishing characteristic of a university. Writing in the last century about the evolution of his own institution into a university, President Barnard of Columbia identified three stages in Columbia's history: the period of the college, the period when professional schools were added, and the period when a program of graduate studies was developed that made Columbia a true university. Harvard, Yale, Princeton and other powerful institutions did not adopt the title 'university' until they had established graduate faculties and graduate departments after the model of the nineteenth century German universities. There was a profound change in each of these venerable institutions when they ceased being colleges and became universities, a change that involved much more than administrative organization, diversity of aims, and numbers of students. The change affected undergraduate as well as graduate education. The same is true at Boston College, where our Graduate School of Arts and Sciences has now been a university influence for more than one third of its history.

What is the special focus and motivation of graduate education that makes a university different from a single-purpose college? The briefest answer is one word: research. The university is dedicated to pushing back the frontiers of knowledge. The person it prizes is the productive inquirer, the creative thinker. The liberal arts college is concerned with the transmission of knowledge and the preservation of a cultural tradition. The university, in addition to this same purpose of conserving knowledge, is concerned with the invention and extension of knowledge. The college is primarily a place of teaching. A university has as much interest in teaching as does a college; but it also feeds teaching and keeps it fresh through research. As a teaching institution only, a college's creative activity consists in bringing students into vital contact with the learning of the past. A university has a like obligation to pass on traditional learning, but it also devotes its energies to the enlargement of the tradition, and one of its ambitions as far as its students are concerned is to teach them to be contributors to as well as recipients of this tradition.

Rev. Charles F. Donovan, S.J.

The learned world and society itself have both accepted the modern university as a chief source of intellectual and social progress. Certainly in the United States, where in the foreseeable future one third of the population will be Catholic, it is appropriate and even vitally important for Catholics to maintain and develop some vigorous universities. We should be proud that Alma Mater is one of the institutions that is meeting this very real need, and it is important for us to realize the wider mission that Boston College has undertaken and the larger role all connected with Boston College are destined to play in the cultural history of this country.

A larger percentage of our population pursues graduate education today than attended college fifty years ago. As the largest Catholic institution in one of the heavily Catholic areas of the country, Boston College has an obligation to meet this need. As the pressures and desires for advanced education increase, the four-year college not associated with a university is going to lose the position of intellectual influence it so long held in America. There will, we hope, always be strong liberal arts colleges like Amherst, Williams and the Boston College of the early twentieth century. But the dominant intellectual force of the future will unquestionably be the university, and we should applaud and abet every move to strengthen the position of Boston College as a leading university.

In the competitive market of 1961

there are definite advantages in being a university. Scholars who have caught research fever during their own doctoral studies want to continue research and to live with research-minded people and breathe a research-laden atmosphere. Hence they generally prefer a post in a university to one in an undergraduate college. At a university, even though all or most of the young instructors' teaching may be with undergraduates, they have rich library and laboratory facilities available and can look forward to the time when advanced undergraduate or graduate classes will be assigned to them and they can have research disciples of their own. The university is a mecca of scholars, and the presence of established academic leaders in undergraduate classes as well as in graduate colloquia and research laboratories gives intellectual strength to every operation of the institution. Thus even the undergraduate student benefits; because he attends a university, he has as instructors men of the broadest academic training, productive scholars, who pass from the undergraduate lecture into the Ph.D. seminar. And as undergraduates begin to dig deep into their major subject, they have all around them on campus the example of the graduate faculty and graduate research, as well as the impressive scholarly facilities of the university.

The university faculty man of the twentieth century is in no ivory tower. Even if he wanted a life of private research, society will not grant it to him. Nowadays scholarship is not limited to investigation of the remote and the recondite. The community comes to the university with its problems and seeks help in their solution. Here the university must exercise academic asceticism. It must be in the world and must be concerned with the problems of the locality and of the moment; but it cannot limit itself to the immediate or the regional. It must be, as Abraham Flexner once said, both responsible and irresponsible, answering to the call of society, yet not dominated by popular interests or governmental demands.

A university serves its community and society at large in ways that a college is not expected to. The Citizens Economic Seminars sponsored by our College of Business Administration have been an outstanding example of such university service. There is a double reward in such undertakings: there is the service rendered to the public, and at the same time a heightening of the institution's stature in the eyes of the public. A few years ago President Pusey opened a meeting of eastern educators at Harvard with a reference to the most recent CBA Seminar. He added no footnote to explain what these seminars are or why they are worth the attention of responsible scholars and citizens. It was taken for granted that all understood the contribution of Boston College through the seminars. Just recently, when the fate of the Arts Centre on the Charles River was being discussed, a respected legislator suggested that it should be made the subject of study by the Boston College Citizens Seminars. Thus, through a typically university operation, the Boston College Seminars, the prestige of the entire institution has been enhanced and all students, especially undergraduates, are taught an impressive lesson in social responsibility as they see their university deeply and effectively involved in the solution of community problems.

Within the past few decades we have witnessed a vast new development affecting our universities. Not only does the local community expect help from the regional university; the nation as a whole and the world community are looking to American universities for leadership in solving world problems. One dramatic aspect of this development is the flow of students from foreign countries to the United States. For obvious reasons, it is incumbent upon American Catholic higher education to do its share in this regard. Since most of these academic visitors to our shores, especially those from the emerging nations, needs technical or professional and graduate training, they naturally gravitate to universities rather than to colleges. Here again, then, Boston College has a special role to play as a leading Catholic university. We gladly accept this responsibility and are welcoming and supporting many foreign students each year, and we are proud of the action of the undergraduate governmental body, the Campus Council, in setting aside funds each year to bring a student from Africa or Latin America to our campus.

On the other hand, universities, because of their resources in scholarship, technical competence, and creative thought, are called upon to undertake or support projects in foreign countries. There is a new partnership between government and the world of learning to bring the blessings of peace and prosperity to underprivileged peoples. We are witnessing in the United States a great burst of what may be called secular missionary zeal. There is no contradiction between the social and the spiritual gospel. And we who bea dedication to the advancement of learning, and a sense of personal and social responsibility as all of these are known in the light of reason and of Divine Revelation."

The aim of undergraduate education at Boston College today is the same as in 1897; the intellectual and moral formation of the individual through mastery of traditional learning. But today this takes place at an institution that is fulfilling its university function of advanced learning and doing its part in the service of community, country and the world. Boston College is just as interested today as she ever was in the individual student and his academic and personal welfare. But Alma Mater has assumed added burdens and obligations, commitments to learning itself and to the world beyond Chestnut Hill. Because we are a university, by duty and desire we are and hope to become an ever stronger and more influential center of creative research.

long to a missionary Church should be eager to join in such worthy humanitarian projects as those sponsored by Aid for International Development or the Peace Corps. Because we are a university and have the resources, varied talents and expertise of a university, Boston College is in a position to engage in international projects, and we currently have plans for Institutes devoted to the Middle East and Latin America. This too has its educational value for the undergraduate; because of the actions of his university his gaze is lifted above provincialism to global issues and responsibilities.

The broadened commitments and responsibilities of Boston College now that it is a full-fledged university, contrasted with its academic mission during its collegiate period, are indicated by excerpts from early and recent Boston College catalogues. The catalogue for the year 1897-8 contained this summary of the institution's aims:

"Education is understood by the Fathers of the Society in its completest sense, as the full and harmonious development of all those faculties that are distinctive of man. It is not, therefore, mere instruction or the communication of knowledge. In fact, the acquisition of knowledge, though it necessarily accompanies any right system of education, is a secondary result of education, not its end. The end is culture, and mental and moral development."

Since 1953 the General Catalogue of the University has contained a brief statement of the over-all University objective. In part, it reads:

"As an institution of higher learning, Boston College has as its objective the conservation, the extension, and the diffusion of knowledge by means of the schools, colleges, institutions, and resources of the University with the purpose of imparting, in the tradition of Christian humanism, an understanding of the unity of knowledge, an appreciation of our intellectual heritage,

We are a university. The reality is more important than the name. All who are a part of Boston College should understand and should be proud to share in the exciting intellectual developments on the Heights that have made Boston College a Catholic university that keeps pace with the exuberant growth of both scholarship and Catholicism in America.

GRADUATE STUDY

POWER OF THE UNIVERSITY

Rev. Joseph A. Devenny, S.J.

Dean, Graduate School, Arts & Sciences

Original College Site on James Street

ANY alumnus whose college-day acquaintance with the Boston College Graduate School of Arts and Sciences dates, like the present writer's teaching-day acquaintance, from before 1935 will find that the existing splendid outgrowth from the college will take a good deal of knowing. An acquaintance gained between 1935 and 1953 would come much closer to reproducing the existing reality. But it is only at this latter date with the setting up of its doctoral programs that the Graduate School has at last begun to be the highly developed, well-knit, and vigorously growing institution that it now is.

This life of which we can all be proud is not the result, any more than any other life, according to the familiar thesis in psychology, of spontaneous generation. It grew and — be it constantly remembered — is still growing from existing life, not physical indeed, but social. Within the school itself we like to think of it as the culmination of the academic life of the college and indeed of the whole university. But like the college and the other schools of the university it grew most immediately out of the life of Boston Catholic society, and we come increasingly to realize nowadays, from Boston society generally. Less immediately but still evidently, it had an origin in the whole Catholic academic life of the United States. Remotely but very really and unforgettably it owes a debt to American society as a whole and in particular for this society's peculiar solution of the problem of creating a higher education which in its view would suit its special needs and aims.

The full-dress account of the history of the American graduate school is much too fascinating to be condensed into a few sentences here. But in terms again of life it may fairly be represented as a triple-faceted phenomenon. The first facet reveals a mounting appetite, the second a hungry feeding, and the third a striking growth. To the first, which is of the days before the Civil War, belong elements at home and abroad. At home there is the consciousness — mounting slowly in the early nineteenth century — of the meagreness of post-graduate educational opportunities in the United States, and the growing efforts to win academic respectability for subjects lying outside the field of the traditional liberal arts. Abroad there is the Anglican religious test of the best known English universities, and the fear of a radicalism that may still be lurking in the post-revolutionary universities of France, while an aura of glory hovers over the German universities — the glory of significant human advance resulting from the centering of the studies of the philosophical faculty around research. This admirable and most interesting advance linked teaching to research and practised the new characteristic techniques of the seminary, the scholarly lecture, the university laboratory, and the monographic study. It is said that before 1850 not more than 200 Americans had been to a German university but they became eloquent pleaders.

It is only with that situation that developed out of the Civil War; the industrialization, the urbanization, and the creation of new wealth, that the appetite for what Germany had become imperious and the money needed to transport this to the United States was in hand. Thus the hungry feeding was able to begin in earnest. More than 10,000 Americans are said to have gone to the German University up to the outbreak of the First World War. One half of these went to Berlin. The German university phenomenon had its roots deep in the secular consequences of the Reformation and while it was occupied with the pursuit of a rational understanding of reality it was inspired by a philosophy which was concerned with finding ultimate meanings in idealism. It is not surprising to discover that the wandering scholars who had grown up in and were returning to a pragmatistic America would select the rational understanding and reject the ultimate meaning. Back in the United States these men became largely through the philanthropy of emerging American industrialism, the founders and the faculties of the rapidly multiplying American secular graduate schools. It was $500,000 gained through the Western Union that started Cornell in 1865. $1,000,000 from railroads established Vanderbilt in 1872. Groceries, banking and railroads combined to yield the $3,500,000 with which Johns Hopkins was endowed in 1876. This sum, it has been interestingly remarked, was the equal of Harvard's total endowment after 250 years. Ever larger funds were to come from industry. The Stanford railroad and banking fortune was used to found Stanford University in 1885 with $20,000,000. Rockefeller oil money was able to give $30,000,000 in 1892 to the University of Chicago. Steel, coal, oil, automobiles lie behind the creation of the Carnegie, Rockefeller, and Ford Foundations whose gifts to higher education and research have run into the hundreds of millions.

The resulting growth is familiar. Johns Hopkins is a symbol of a class of distinguished institutions that have sprung up since the latter part of the nineteenth century. Some 235 graduate schools are said to be now engaged in this form of education drawn from an original German model. Professor Edward J. Power, newly come to our graduate faculty from the University of Detroit, in his pioneer work "A History of Catholic Higher Education in the United States," calls attention to the fact that this marriage of industry and education was entirely free. American industry in the nineteenth century might equally well have chosen, as it did later, to develop its own research. If this had been the course of things our present academic picture might have been much altered. Later stimuli to the further growth of this institution now as characteristically American as the very "man in the street" would include the national experiences of the Second World War and, above all, the shock of Sputnik. A very great deal might be said by way of assessing the spirit, the productive forces, the influence of the American graduate school. We must not neglect to record that it sought and gained a striking advance in man's knowledge of God's works, that it was produced by a unique combination of man's whetted spiritual appetites and his love of his fellow man, and that of itself it effects an ever increasing refinement of certain of man's most God-like gifts.

But enough, and more than enough of what has been rightly called "remote." We must glance quickly at that which was a less remote source of the Boston College Graduate Schools, I mean the graduate school in the Catholic Colleges of the United States. Here we draw appreciatively on the previously mentioned volume of Professor Power. It is not unamusing to find him scolding secular and Catholic colleges alike, though at different periods, for program (1877) and the first organized Graduate School with the distinctive character of graduate study defined as "independent inquiry" and the first doctoral program (all 1895) — goes to Georgetown. The claims of others — Notre Dame and St. Louis — are disallowed on what might be discounted as merely technical grounds. Catholic University, although founded in 1884 was simply an advanced seminary till it opened in 1895 the School of Philosophy and the School of Social Sciences. It will serve as a summary of the years from 1900 to 1930 to state that they were years of trying, which taught all engaged in the effort the inescapable need of facilities, faculty, finances, and good students; which banished much of the wishful thinking from the field; and which laid the foundations of marked progress in standards and quality. As of the present writing there are some ten Catholic graduate schools which the silly fault of trying to make themselves big by a wish and the use of a word. There is much in this book which illuminates the social setting of the American Catholic College and Graduate School. It is also clear, and the studies of Professor John D. Donovan, chairman of the department of Social Sciences, go further to show, that much remains to be done before we are as well informed on this Catholic history as we are on its companion secular chapter.

The credit for American Catholic firsts — for the first formal graduate offer programs leading to the Ph.D.: Boston College, Catholic University, Duquesne, Fordham, Georgetown, Loyola (Chicago), Marquette, Notre Dame, St. John's (Brooklyn), St. Louis. In the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States which held its first annual meeting in December 1961 in Washington some 190 out of 235 graduate schools in the United States have membership. Boston College is one of the ten Jesuit Graduate Schools and one of the nineteen Catholic Graduate Schools represented.

But it is time, and high time, to devote all our attention to the Graduate School of Boston College. For the facts we have gathered here we are indebted to the valuable "History of Boston College" by the late Fr. David R. Dunigan, S.J. If in the case of the general American Catholic phenomenon we feel the need of further knowledge of the social history, the need here is tantalizing. We have in this work a collection of precious facts along with references to the supporting documents existing in various archives. Much remains to be done for us thoroughly to understand the living social forces which correspond in this case to what was earlier called appetite, feeding, and growth.

On October 1, 1926 a significant reorganization of existing graduate classes occurred under the new dean, Fr. John B. Creeden, S.J., formerly president of Georgetown University. Afternoon and evening classes being conducted at the James Street building would henceforth, it was announced, be open to women as well as men. Thus were united for the first time three existing but hitherto separate operations: The School of Education at Chestnut Hill for male public school teachers, the courses for religious teachers of the archdiocese which had hitherto been conducted mainly at the Cathedral center, and the advanced courses which had been opened to lay women at the Young Men's Catholic Association at James Street.

The three strands thus united had each its peculiar history. Evening graduate classes for young men were started at James Street in 1912 under Fr. Matthew L. Fortier, S.J., and were continued through 1914. For admission to these a familiarity with Catholic philosophy was required. Those in need of this were directed to the Young Men's Catholic Association Evening School which had opened in 1910. It is on record that some 83 master's degrees were earned in this early beginning.

With the close of World War I and in the fall of 1919 a School of Education, with Fr. James F. Mellyn, S.J. as dean, was opened at Chestnut Hill. Social need is more palpably evident even in Fr. Dunigan's sober account. The City of Boston School Committee in an effort to alleviate the dearth of men teachers after the war, sponsored training courses for college graduates at Boston College and at Boston University. Until the term beginning September 1922 the School Committee paid the tuitions, and until the close of the school year 1926-27 it maintained its sponsoring interest. At this time the need was felt to have been met.

In 1925-26 the title "Graduate School" first occurred in the official prospectus to designate the institution which was continuing the work of the earlier School of Education. On September 15, 1926 it was announced that from October 1, 1926 that this Graduate School would be open to men and women and would hold classes in the afternoon and evening at James Street. This was the first step in the direction of union.

The courses for religious women had been inaugurated Jan 2, 1920 through the planning of Msgr. Augustine F. Hickey and the permission of Cardinal O'Connell. It was intended to utilize the newly established School of Education with some extension of its faculty and facilities for the enhancement of the training of the teachers of the parochial schools. These courses were given at the Cathedral School Hall and certain other centers of the diocese through the school year and also during the summer session. Out of these courses grew in 1924 the first Summer School for religious women on the Chestnut Hill campus.

Finally in 1923-24, while the School of Education for men was in operation at Chestnut Hill and the courses for religious women were being conducted at the Cathedral and other centers, lay women were admitted for the first time to courses in the evening school of the Young Men's Catholic Association. Those taking advanced courses were given credit towards degrees to be granted by the Boston College School of Education. So much then for the three strands which were united in the fall of 1926 at James Street and remained there for the following nine years.

In 1929 Fr. John F. Doherty, S.J. succeeded Fr. Creeden who had just been appointed the regent of the newly opened Law School. In 1934-35 the Graduate School was moved back to Chestnut Hill. Here it was able to avail itself with greater ease of the existing library and laboratory facilities. In 1935 Fr. George A. O'Donnell, S.J. was appointed dean. Succeeding deans have been Fr. James L. Burke, S.J., 1951-52 and Fr. Paul A. Fitzgerald, S.J. 1953-60.

The former "School of Education" had granted some few master-of-science degrees. Once the Graduate School was established on the Chestnut Hill campus the development of the master of science program was markedly facilitated. In 1953 Ph.D. programs were introduced in History, Education, and Economics.

As now constituted the Graduate School has fifteen departments: in the area of languages — Classics, English, Modern Languages; in the area of the physical sciences — physics, geophysics, chemistry, biology, mathematics; in the area of social sciences — history, government, economics, and social studies; in the professional areas — nursing and education; and at the heart of humanities — philosophy. Doctoral programs are now in operation in five of these: chemistry, economics, education, history, and physics. In all departments there are programs leading to the master's degree. 184 graduate degrees were awarded at the commencement exercises of 1961. The doctorates were in economics (1) and education (2). The master's degrees were distributed through all fifteen departments.

It is pleasant to set on record here new offerings of the Graduate School. There is the program in mobility for the blind, which goes under the impressive title of peripatology. It has been established in the department of education with the help of government funds. In response to mounting appeals and in connection with Boston College's growing interest in Latin America a program in Latin American studies is being systematically constructed. It is a source of distinct pride in this connection to be able to add that the director of this program, who serves also as acting-chairman of the history department, has just been awarded the Robertson Prize by the Conference on Latin American History for his recent paper ARGENTINE CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY. This past year has seen the beginnings of joint programs in American and in Medieval studies. A master's program in psychology is joyfully announced for the fall of 1962. Offerings in the field of Slavic studies are swelling noticeably. Last but not least new doctoral programs in biology, English, and mathematics are now at the stage of advanced planning.

Graduate education — as its history and our short experience proves — has an insatiable thirst for money. No opportunity of drawing on public or private funds has been let slip. We have been granted 6 National Defense Educational Alliance fellowships in economics, and 5 in physics. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has granted us a Summer Institute in Guidance and Counselling Training and is also the source of generous traineeships in nursing and peripatology. We have National Scientific Foundation fellows in chemistry and mathematics and our N.S.F. Mathematics Institutes under the vigorous direction of Fr. Bezuska, S.J., are a constant source of inspiration to us and to the whole surrounding academic community. This past summer the Coe Foundation made its third grant for a Summer Institute in American studies.

A word on current enrollment would call for the statistics for the fall semester of 1961-62. These are:

Men: 452
Women: 453
TOTAL 905

In this total are included 47 foreign students from Canada, South America, Europe, Africa, Asia. The remaining students represent a good cross section of the United States with the southern and eastern seaboard showing strongest.

Naturally New England makes its involvement dominantly felt. At this point we can once more put our hand on an important social force at play in the life of this institution. It is the only Catholic University in the New England area. This fact highlights a standing challenge and responsibility of the same period faculty and library and laboratory facilities.

In these days of the 100th Anniversary Development Program one might be tempted to make a selfish plug for the Graduate Center alone. This would be nothing but blindness. It has been previously and correctly set down that the facilities, its faculty and students. It is however precisely with an eye to facilities that all who have any place in their hearts for the Graduate School look with expectations to the new Graduate Center. Here will be the longed-for provision of space for the precious and increasing faculty, space for their research and their seminars and conferences. Here at last also will be a place set aside for the gathering and binding together of the graduate student body.

But we must conclude, not however without one final remark. We began by observing that the particular activity of the Graduate School is a form, a very noble form of social and individual life. Even in its most secular form it is an undeniable movement of man towards God. In Catholic form it is a conscious pursuit of a resemblance to God in His Omniscience and a deep awareness that this Omniscience does not exist except in substantial unity with God's Infinite Holiness.

*Rev. Brendan Connolly, S.J.
Director of Libraries*

TWO of the most conspicuous features of a university are its marked diversity in offering many formations in the several different professions, and an all penetrating concern with research at every level of education. These elements have a very marked impact on the library which supports both instruction and research at each step. Although estimates vary somewhat widely, authorities generally concede that one can establish a reasonable minimum for the number of volumes a college library should possess in order to fulfill its undergraduate responsibilities. A figure in the vicinity of 100,000 volumes is probably the most widely accepted. When one comes, however, to the measure of the kind of library needed by a university in its double role of variegated instruction and pursuit of the truth, the answer comes perilously close to being a case of "the sky's the limit."

It must be very evident that such professional schools in a university as those of Education, Nursing, Business Administration, Law, Social Work, and Theology have, each of them, a formidable literature without which they cannot properly prepare students for their professional careers. Thus, to cite two examples, the School of Law at Boston College possesses upwards of 50,000 volumes and the School of Theology over 90,000 volumes. Several of these schools operate on a graduate level, others operate, as does the School of Arts & Sciences, on an undergraduate level and all of these latter are of course, heavily underpinned by traditional liberal arts subjects. Despite the pressure which so wide an educational burden exerts on library expansion, it is a minor pressure compared to that exercised by the graduate school and its faculty in its constant pursuit of truth through research. It is in this area that the "sky high" criterion constantly threatens to overwhelm the ability of the university to provide and the ability of the library staff to control the floods of required materials. At this point, some few simple but almost terrifying statistics may be illuminating. For upwards of 75 years research libraries in the United States, such as that possessed by Boston College, have doubled their holdings with inexorable regularity every fourteen to twenty years. The only exceptions to this extraordinary growth seem to occur in institutions whose holdings have passed the 2,000,000 volumes mark, and even here the growth continues at an extraordinary pace.

Looking at the book stock growth of Boston College we find that in 1935, a period when no undergraduate instruction was provided outside of the School of Arts & Sciences and when graduate instruction was at a relatively very modest level, the number of volumes in the library was 140,000. By the late forties, after World War II, this number had doubled to approximately 275,000 volumes. At the beginning of the current academic year, the number stood at 540,000 volumes and by the end of the year it will be close to 600,000 volumes. At this rate of growth, which is normal and necessary, we have every expectation of passing the 1,000,000 mark very easily in the 1970s. The book stock in 1935 was cared for by a staff of six. The staff at present numbers 54. By 1972 or '73 it will probably be close to 90 in number.

It must not be thought that this expansion is sought after for itself, nor that it is a wild, uncontrolled thing. Uncontrolled buying could surpass the financial possibilities of the richest university in the world. Unplanned intake could result in a large number of books of relatively worthless content. It is only by the combined knowledge and skill of teaching faculty and professional library staff that the available funds can be wisely used to cover the immediate research necessities and to foresee as far as the clouded crystal-ball permits the research needs of tomorrow. This calls for a continuing series of appraisals and agonizing reappraisals which must include consideration of immediate usefulness, a filling in of gaps inherited from the past, the relative intensity of activity in various departments, a knowledge of the future development of the University, and, a factor which frequently confuses all of the others, the present availability of materials of worth which must be acquired now or perhaps never.

This last factor of purchase on the basis of opportunity is one of the most intriguing of University acquisition programs. If one is fortunate enough to acquire by purchase (or, of course, more fortunate in acquiring by gift) the library of a scholarly person who has been a discriminating purchaser of books in his own special field of competence over a long period of time, equivalently one is in the position of repairing a constant, even though necessary neglect of that area by the library for as long as 30, 40, or 50 years. It has been the good fortune of the University libraries over the last few years to acquire quite a few of these treasures. Mention of some of them may perhaps also be indicative of the variety of research projects underway or contemplated by the academic community. The Modern Language Department, for instance, has been immeasurably enriched by a collection of Rumanian literature purchased in one block and sufficiently extensive as to constitute Boston College as the possessor of what is probably within the first three or four collections of this Romance language in the United States. Other purchases have been made in similar fashion in history, in Far Eastern affairs, in Slavic languages, in European travel accounts, in publications of English scholarly societies, in Latin American studies. The only other alternative to such acquisitions, and it is an alternative both inefficient and expensive, is the tedious pouring over antiquarian booksellers' catalogs or the continuing search of large bookdealers' shelves.

Science has recently pointed out to us that some materials, under the stress of great heat or intense cold react in most unexpected ways. Mr. Keyes Metcalf, former Director of Libraries at Harvard University, makes the following points: in his discussion of the growth of libraries:

(1) The libraries—particularly research libraries—tend to grow more rapidly than other parts of educational institutions because they add to their collections and rarely discard from them. Books remain in the library, but students in due course graduate or leave.

(2) That unit costs in libraries tend to increase, rather than decrease, as collections grow larger. It takes more time for the acquisition librarian to make sure that a book considered for purchase is not already in the library; cataloging becomes more expensive as the catalog becomes larger and more complex; the costs of public service rise because it takes longer in a large library than in a small one to find a volume on the shelves, deliver it to a reader, and later return it to its place; and, finally, librarians have not been able by the use of mass productions technique to counteract the increase in unit costs.

(3) The improved library service almost inevitably stimulates demands for service without automatically producing additional income, so improved service, while it may solve old problems, is likely to create new ones.

(4) That as library collections grow larger, they inevitably include an increasingly large proportion of infrequently used books.

These complexities show themselves even more concretely in several figures which the above cited authority gives for library costs in acquiring new materials. Thus, for instance, a book which can be purchased for $3.00 will, by the time it is completely integrated into the library, have cost the institution a total of $10.00. A periodical whose annual subscription may be $7.50 will have a total cost of $19.50 by the time it is securely in its new home. These factors are driving university librarians to their kind of research in finding more economical and equally effective means of controlling the giant research instrument which they are attempting to build. A great deal of time has been spent in investigating possibilities of using electronic computers, of employing various photographic devices including television, and in a challenging re-examination of traditional modes of procedure. Some economies have resulted from these, others are anticipated. The sad fact remains, however, that like most research instruments, the library, perhaps the most basic of all research instruments, is an expensive, complex, but absolutely indispensable element in university life.

Several times in this sketch we have had occasion to mention the library staff and it is important to note that no mere collection of books, no matter how extensive, can serve the university purpose unless it is itself served by highly trained personnel capable of making the library treasures available to the scholars who come to it. Boston College has been very wonderfully favored in the quality of skill and dedication which its staff has brought to the work of administering the university library collections. Many of you will doubtless recall the time when Mr. John M. O'Loughlin all but single-handed presided over the library facilities of your Alma Mater. Happily, Mr. O'Loughlin still presides over the Bapst Library with an accumulation of decades of experience which is invaluable for the effective operation of this central depository collection. Through the years, however, the Bapst Library itself has grown more and more complex and its staff has increased to meet the new complexities. In addition, most of the professional schools which began off campus collected their own special materials with the assistance of librarians having particular competence in those subject fields. We have been fortunate also in the acquisition, mostly by gift, of special collections of books in very closely defined areas such as Irish studies, or the Francis Thompson manuscripts, or the Williams Jamaican collection. These, too, have had the advantage of devoted and informed care by staff members.

The resources of the University library have come a very long way. When we stop to consider that at the turn of the century there was only one university in the United States which had so large a book stock as Boston College has now, when we consider that the Library of Congress at that same time contained fewer than a million volumes, we may experience a quite legitimate pride at the rate of growth which has been ours. And yet we cannot afford ever to be snug or satisfied. The degree to which a university's prestige depends upon the excellence of its book collections forbids us to rest on our laurels however shiny and however hardly earned. The giants who began the material foundations of our present day university on the Heights showed a wonderful breadth of vision and daring in execution when they provided so lavishly and so beautifully for the undergraduate needs of students during the last half-century. The present scope and size of the Boston College library system would have amazed and delighted them could they have foreseen it. Our present task is to increase, enrich, and order our resources in such fashion as to earn the gratitude and respect of those who will learn and produce here during the second century of our corporate lives. Thus, "we may be fellow helpers of the truth."

BOOKS FOR ALUMNI

In the Fall '61 issue of the Alumni News, there was listed a group of books compiled by Professor John Norton of the English Department. These books are recommended reading for all alumni and their families. Additional volumes will appear in future issues and we would appreciate your comments on this column.

College of Business Administration

IN 1963 Boston College will celebrate its 100th anniversary; in that same year the College of Business Administration will celebrate its 25th anniversary. And like its parent institution, this relatively new college brings to the modern educational scene elements that are brand new as well as some that are centuries old in tradition.

Twenty-five years ago some observers looked awry at the introduction of a College of Business Administration to the Boston College campus. Actually the idea of a professional undergraduate school of administration is not new, even to Jesuit educators. Both Marquette and St. Louis universities, both Jesuit schools, have had colleges of business as far back as 1910. As in the fields of medicine, law, engineering and education, the rapid growth and complexity of knowledge has required a more concentrated and focussed plan of education for those who are to be leaders in their respective professions. The Jesuit response has been to integrate the professional liberal components of education in each of these areas. Today all 29 Jesuit universities offer programs in business administration. They combine much of the traditional Jesuit approach with the most recent innovations in professional education. A college of business administration is no longer a stranger to a Jesuit campus. It may have a new look—but it has a traditional poise.

The importance of a combined liberal—professional education today can be judged from the make-up of the alumni who return to the Heights for the annual Alumni Day. In the earlier classes the large majority of visitors represent the service professions — doctors, lawyers, teachers, and priests. But among the more recent classes, especially since the second World War, more and more of the alumni come from the field of business. Even the scientists and the lawyers find themselves more than ever closely connected with business firms. Today about 6 out of 10 male Boston College graduates enter some field of business, regardless of the college they attended while on the Heights.

The College of Business Administration is designed in its content and in its method to prepare a student both for life and for a career in business. Its program combines, therefore, both a liberal and a professional education. It takes the time-tested system of Jesuit liberal education and superimposes on this foundation a professional education designed to form leaders in the field of administration. It does not replace, but rather augments the firm core of liberal education so characteristic of Jesuit schools. Like all Jesuit education, it prepares its students for a full and human life. Like new disciplines of engineering, law, medicine and education, it also prepares its students for a career. It is, therefore, at home with both the modern citizen and the traditional academician. True to the Ignatian concept of education, which has always combined the liberalizing and the practical, the Jesuit education provided in a college of business administration is both liberal and practical, speculative as well as useful to man.

The curriculum of the College of Business Administration is designed specifically to meet this double standard. Jesuit education everywhere is built on a central core of Philosophy and Theology. These subjects, even more than the humanities, are the most basic integrating forces in the curriculum structure. In the College of Business Administration, as in the College of Arts, they form the heart of the educational system. They are as necessary for the business student as for the classics or education student.

Traditionally in the Jesuit system, the humanities—literature, history, languages and mathematics—have occupied a central place. These too are preserved in the professional education of businessmen. The entering freshman at the C.B.A. takes the same courses in English, mathematics and language as his arts counterpart and he may even sit in the same classes with him. A sign of the times at Boston College is the location of economics in the liberal core of education. Economics is in fact the largest undergraduate department in the College of Arts and Sciences, even though only a few years ago economics, or any other social science, would not be included in the equipment of a liberally educated man. But it is difficult to imagine today how a man could be liberally educated without some knowledge of the complex relations and processes involved in man's use of scarce resources. Economics, therefore, is included as a basic required course of study in the College of Business Administration, and other social sciences are offered as electives there.

Altogether, the liberal portion of the curriculum makes up about 60% of the total four year undergraduate program. This means that almost three out of every five hours of study are concentrated on those subjects designed to humanize and “liberalize” a young mind and open it to life through its own progressive intellectual development. The liberal subjects are intentionally concentrated in the first two years, and they form the foundation upon which the professional subjects build.

The professional core of the curriculum is made up of tool and content subjects. The former—accounting, statistics, organizational behavior, quantitative analysis—furnish the necessary analytic tools for problem solving. The latter—production, finance, marketing—provide both the concepts and the processes of individual areas within the broad field of business. The aim of both types of subjects is to provide a broad theoretical foundation as well as analytical competence in the fields of business. Just as the liberal portion of the curriculum prepares the student for a full human life, so the professional portion prepares him for his career in business.

FOR BUSINESS

Today education on all levels finds itself faced with contrasting tendencies towards generalization on the one hand and specialization on the other. This is also true in the colleges of business administration. Today at Boston College, a student of business administration enjoys some specialization within his field but actually his specialization is less than in the sciences. A chemistry student at Boston College, for example, must take 36 credit hours of concentration in his chosen major field. A business student is required to take 24 hours in his major. And beginning next year this concentration will be reduced to 18 hours. This will put his concentration even below that of an English major in the College of Arts, who today is required to take 24 credits in his major field. To some degree specialization has been necessary because of the tremendous advances of knowledge in every field and also because of the pressure to prepare for graduate school. In the C.B.A., however, the opposite trend toward generalization in education has served to offset this tendency to specialization. The aim in the College of Business Administration is to prepare the student not for a specialized job but for competence in the wide field of administration. It seeks to provide him with the liberal and professional synthesis of learning which will enable him "to take a capable and zealous part in the social and cultural life of his own era and leaven that life with the principles of Christ" (George E. Ganss, S.J., "Collegiate Education for Business in the Jesuit University"). Hence it introduces him to the foundations of management science, but checks his specialization in any narrow field.

Curriculum content is only one-half of the innovation of a college of busness administration. The other half is found in its new methods. Here too, the C.B.A. combines the new and the traditional. Jesuit teaching, according to the Ratio Studiorum, has always stressed consistency, logicity and forcefulness of expression. Jesuit students are often known by their ability to get to the heart of the problem even through a maze of words and a torrent of irrelevancies. This aim is preserved in the C.B.A. The constant effort of the teacher is to reach back to the principles underlying knowledge and forward to the applications that flow from the premises. The same principles of the Ratio Studiorum—self activity, motivation of the student, integration of new learning with knowledge already acquired, and a consideration of individual differences among students—are invoked today. In the field of business they are even expanded. Much greater emphasis than ever before is placed on class discussion, team projects, outside reading, group solutions, case method, problem-solving and individual research projects.

In Senior year all students are required to take a course in Business Policy. In this course teams of students —representing several specialized fields of concentration—join together to analyze problems and seek solutions and follow out consequences of their action.

This course in Business Policy does more than integrate knowledge. It synthesizes knowledge and educates men to make prudent, socially responsible decisions. Thus it is a capstone to the professional training of businessmen who must constantly gather information, analyze problems and then on the basis of this information, make appropriate decisions and live with the consequences of those decisions. Just as internship is essential to the training of a doctor, so this "synthetic internship" is an essential part of the professional training of a businessman.

Another innovation in teaching method at the C.B.A. is the Honors Program. Honors programs have developed greatly in universities in the last fifteen years. In professional schools, however, they have not expanded at such a rapid pace. There are at present only five such honors programs in the colleges of business administration in this country. One of these is at Boston College. Beginning in Sophomore year students are selected to join the Honors program on the basis of their Freshman year performance. About 100 students are currently enrolled. Under the supervision of an Honors Director, special classes, seminars, enriched courses, outside reading, oral exercises and research projects are offered to the student so that he can advance as rapidly as his ability and curiosity will prompt him to do so.

Since the ability to get along with other people, to organize activities, to accomplish objectives working through human beings, and to show leadership are of such importance to a businessman, special care is taken to encourage all students in the College of Business Administration to take part in extra-curricular activities, particularly those which give promise of developing written and oral expression. This year on the B.C. campus the top student in the ROTC, the President of the Campus Council, the Editor of the Yearbook, the President of the Glee Club, the President of the Dramatic Society and the leader of the Drill Team, are all students from the College of Business Administration. This is looked upon as evidence of their capacity for leadership and is actively encouraged by the administration of the school. The integration of extracurricular activities and outside research is considered as making up one teaching method to turn out leaders of our business society.

Many high school students about to enter college today do not have firm ideas on their choice of career. This makes some hesitate in choosing business as a specialization in college. Yet it is possible to predict success in a college of business administration where there is present a good mathematics and English background along with some evidence of leadership in extracurricular activities. Those who do best at a professional undergraduate school seem to be those who, though they may know nothing of the terminology or problems of business are definitely oriented towards leadership in group activities. In short, a student who wants not so much to criticize our present society as to participate in it in an important way and has the intellectual and personal qualities to do so, will do well in a college of business administration.

What of the future of the C.B.A.? Today Boston College conducts the largest Catholic full-time undergraduate college of business administration in the country. Its 1500 students are preparing to follow their 3600 graduates into responsible positions in business, law, hospital and public administration. Its Citizen's Seminars, attended by Boston's outstanding civic and business leaders, have opened up entirely new contacts between the University and the metropolitan community. It is continually experimenting with new methods, new courses and new problems. It is exploring new tools of quantitative analysis and social psychology in its research and curriculum.

Along with its parent University it brings together the new and traditional elements that have always marked true Jesuit education.

When the synthesis of educational principles contained in Part IV of the Constitutions of the Society of Jesus is applied to our modern social and cultural order, collegiate education for business is found to deserve a highly important place in a Jesuit university.

George E. Ganss, S.J., "Collegiate Education for Business in the Jesuit University"

[Business]

"It probably employs a wider range of capacities from unskilled to talented, from dull to brilliant, than any other type of endeavor. It makes use of people of very little skill, the physically handicapped, and the mentally handicapped. It uses vast number of people representing an infinite variety of skills, including highly developed skills, and likewise it uses people of great knowledge, wisdom, and understanding. In business these diverse skills and talents are co-ordinated and directed to purposeful ends. In a sense the able make the less able more effective. Management helps the less able to be more productive than they could ever be without the assistance of the knowledge, incentive, character, and organizing power of those who occupy what we call 'responsible' executive positions in business. Indeed, this making other people more productive is one of the great social contributions of management."

editor's memo

The President of Boston College, Very Reverend Michael P. Walsh, S.J., recently announced the appointment of Rev. Leo P. O'Keefe, S.J., of the Theology Department, as Assistant to the President. A graduate of the Class of 1929, Father O'Keefe served as a chaplain during World War II and was formerly both Retreat Master and a Superior at Campion Hall.

Among some of the distinguished visitors on the campus during the past two months were: LT. GENERAL ARTHUR G. TRUDEAU, Army Chief of Research and Development and House Majority Leader — JOHN McCORMACK, both of whom spoke at a Public Affairs Program in November. The Regional Director of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, RICHARD HEALY, spoke on "History and Integration" at the December meeting of the Ethics in Business seminar. In the Humanities Series, famous critic JOHN MASON BROWN was honored by the Ladies of the Alumni at a reception following his November lecture, and Nobel prize poet, T. S. ELIOT spoke before a capacity house in Roberts Center at his December appearance. DR. LEONARD R. CASPER, Professor of English, has received a Fullbright grant to lecture in American studies at the University of the Philippines beginning in September 1962. Dr. Casper is a consultant on Philippine literature for the Rockefeller Foundation and has published numerous poems and short stories. REV. JAMES W. SKEHAN, S.J., Geology Department Chairman is serving as Advisor to Raytheon Communications Division and to the U. S. Air Force. Two graduates of the department, PETER J. GIELISSE, '58 and THOMAS J. ROCKETT, '59 have received their Ph.D.

Rev. Leo P. O'Keefe, S.J.

M. Kamil Dziewanowski

degrees in geology from Ohio State University. Professor M. KAMIL DZIEWANOWSKI of the History Department has written an article on Eastern European History for the "Encyclopedia Americana" and recently published an article on his recent visit to Russia, Poland and Yugoslavia which appeared in the National Review. MR. J. WAYNE NEWTON of the School of Social Work has been elected Vice-President of the Massachusetts Conference on Social Work. REV. ROBERT F. DRINAN, S.J., Dean of the Law School, who is also Vice-President of the American Bar Association, followed his usual busy schedule by addressing the Newman Clubs at Columbia, Amherst and the University of Massachusetts.

ALUMNI ALMANAC

On the evening of Friday, February 2, 1962, McHugh Forum will be the scene of the United States Figure Skating Association National Championship finals. Sponsored by the Skating Club of Boston, the Boston College Alumni Association with Dr. WALTER J. E. CARROLL, '24, as Chairman will host the Friday evening performance. The basic school figure skating will be completed prior to the evening performance, which will consist of free skating, both singles and pairs, in various age groups. Reserved seat tickets are now on sale at the Alumni Office, the Athletic Office and at the Boston Skating Club. Additional events will also take place in McHugh Forum on Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

Ruth A. Houghton

Among the many distinguished Boston College graduates in the service of the nation is Captain RUTH A. HOUGHTON, N.C., U.S.N., presently serving as Director, Navy Nurse Corps. Captain Houghton, a graduate of the School of Nursing ('51), received her M.S. in Nursing at Catholic University and was the first officer in the Navy Nurse Corps to be appointed to the rank of Captain. GEORGE P. DONALDSON, '29, Director of Placement at Boston College has been elected Treasurer of the Eastern College Placement Officers. In 1955, he served as President of this same organization. At the annual communion breakfast of the Ryder Track Club, Chairman LOUIS WELCH, '25 paid tribute to the late famed coach saying in part, "He put physical fitness in proper perspective. He, without sermons, by his own fine example taught us the true meaning of life. Through him we came to realize our proper duties to ourselves, to our families, to our friends and to our God." The Blessed Oliver Plunkett Gaelic Cultural Society of Boston College will celebrate its tenth anniversary this year. REV. MARTIN P. HARNEY, S.J., '19, Moderator of the Society announced that a banquet is being planned for the Spring and all alumni who were members are cordially invited to this "Ceili." The office of the SUB TURRI has announced that there are available a few copies of past publications from 1951 to 1959. Any alumnus interested in purchasing a copy of the College year book may contact Mr. JOHN F. MULLEN, Business Manager of the SUB TURRI. A native of Hungary and a 1951 graduate of Boston College, DR. STEPHEN W. BRUCK, '51 was recently honored in the lead article and cover picture of "Chemical and Engineering News," the national publication of the chemical industry. Dr. Bruck received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Johns Hopkins University, is presently project leader in the National Bureau of Standards and holds two U.S. patents on chemical processes. FRANCIS X. SHEEHAN, '54, Director of the Lay Apostolate Program at Boston College, recently returned from a trip to Jamaica where he surveyed the work being done by the lay apostles in the Kingston diocese.

The former deputy Attorney General for the State of New Hampshire, HON. MAURICE J. MURPHY, L. '53, has been appointed as Senator in Congress by Governor Powell.

On December 10 in Alumni Hall, the Ladies of the Alumni Association sponsored a Christmas party for the international students now attending the various schools at Boston College. Under the chairmanship of FRANCES CONDON, G. '42, CONNIE ANNE REGOLINO, Ed. '59, and MARY CONCEISON, N. '58, more than 75 students representing many of the 28 foreign countries attended the festive occasion.

DEVELOPMENT NEWS

B. C. OBSERVATORY DIRECTOR NAMED TO DEVELOPMENT POST

Rev. Daniel Linehan, S.J., ('27) Chairman of the Department of Geophysics and Director of the Boston College Observatory at Weston, has been enlisted for the Advance Gifts Division of the Development Program.

The internationally known Jesuit scientist returned recently from South America where he was a member of a UNESCO team studying the effects of earthquakes. Earlier, he was on a similar UNESCO mission in Southeast Asia.

Fr. Linehan's fascinating career has brought him to the North Pole, where he made the first magnetic studies at the new location of the North Magnetic Pole; to Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi, the Gulf of Mexico, Venezuela and northern Canada on geophysical surveys in search of petroleum resources; to Rome, where he used seismic and electrical methods to assist archaeologists in locating buried tombs and walls in their studies on the Tomb of St. Peter; to all parts of the nation, where he has personally operated surveys for highways, buildings, dam sites, power plants, tunnels, airports and ground water resources.

In 1958 the U.S. Navy gave him the Distinguished Service Award, one of the very few awarded to civilians by the Navy Department.

Although he has a busy schedule, Fr. Linehan's seismic readings will extend to prospects for the support of the $40-million Development Program of Boston College.

Notes on the 100th Anniversary Development Program

On February 1, national (and international) solicitation of Alumni living outside of Massachusetts will begin in earnest. More than 5,000 graduates in 'outlying points' from California to Florida, from Alaska to Argentina, from Ireland to Greece, from Saudi Arabia to Saipan will be sought out and asked for their support. Boston College now numbers among its Alumni residents of five South American countries, ten European countries (including one in Monaco—not Prince Rainier), five African nations, twelve Asian countries, and Australia. And the far-flung Development organization which is now being formed has every intention to get to all of them, even to Okinawa, where Lt. Thomas J. May ('60) of the 1st Marine Division is stationed. Tom has already written to the Heights for suggestions on ways and means of organizing and soliciting Alumni now at Okinawa with the armed forces.

John J. Walsh ('15), Chairman of the Committee on Estate Planning and Bequests, has announced formal receipt of the first intended bequest to the Development Program, a promised $13,000 from a friend of Boston College living in Western Massachusetts.

The following gentlemen have been enrolled recently by the non-alumni Special Gifts Division: as Associate Chairmen: Attorney Edward R. Butterworth of Lynn; Norman E. MacNeil, Vice President and Treasurer, Ark-Les Switch Corporation, Watertown, Massachusetts; as Vice-Chairmen: Vincent Ambrose, President, Winchester Trust Company, Winchester, Massachusetts; Tobe Deutschmann, President, Tobe Deutschmann Laboratory, Canton, Massachusetts; Justin T. Hogan, Executive Director, Newton Chamber of Commerce; Gregory P. Plunkett, Eastman Dillon Union Securities and Company; Attorney Charles L. Shea of Burlington, Massachusetts.

Rev. John A. McCarthy, S.J. is known among his students as a good teacher who sets high standards of achievement among his students. As Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Fr. McCarthy employs the same high standards for all A. & S. students as well as those he himself teaches.

Fr. McCarthy feels that students are responding to these increasing standards by increasing their own standards and motives. "Students these days," he says, "realize the need of a college degree as a social necessity but the primary aim is for the knowledge and academic discipline that such a degree provides."

"These increasing standards of quality will insure the development of Catholic intellectuals with positive goals in life who will participate actively in modern society."

Fr. McCarthy is active as a spiritual counselor and also continues teaching philosophy. He was graduated from B.C. in 1930 and obtained his S.T.L. at Weston. His teaching association with his Alma Mater began in 1938 as a professor of philosophy.

R.J.M. & J.K.H.

Rev. W. Seavey Joyce, S.J., Dean of the College of Business Administration is very active in civic affairs. He initiated the B.C. Citizens Seminars, is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce, and has recently been elected to the Governing Council of the National Municipal League.

He believes that the University is an essential element in good community life, especially in the business school. In materializing this belief, Fr. Joyce, in his role as Dean, is constantly reviewing and trying to find methods of bettering the standards and performance of the College of Business Administration. Talking with Fr. Joyce, he said, "We are training men who will be intimately involved in the economic life of the community. In our society today, the decisions of businessmen play a more important part than those of kings in earlier generations. We are training businessmen who have not only correct technical knowledge, but also correct moral and social values."

"All teachers, be their subject political theory, or soil conservation should have an interior life of thought. Any teacher, as a teacher is committed to more than a subject; even his intellectual commitment is wider than the subject he teaches," states Fr. Donovan. This is his personal philosophy as well as the one he strives to communicate to his present students who will be future teachers of American youth.

Fr. Donovan obtained his A.B. degree from Boston College and attended both the Fordham and Yale graduate schools. He is president of both the Massachusetts Council on Teacher Education and the New England Association of College Teacher's of Education. He is also Academic Vice President at Boston College and retains the position of Dean of the school of Education, a post he has held since 1952.

Rita P. Kelleher, Dean of the Boston College School of Nursing, is very active in professional nursing organizations. She is a former Director of the Archdiocesan Council of Nursing and at the present time she is Chairman of the Nursing Council of the United Community Services and a director of the Conference of Catholic Schools of Nursing.

Through all her activities, Miss Kelleher's main concern is the improvement of the education standards for all students in the schools of nursing in Massachusetts. As she says, "Planning educational programs for graduates of diploma or associate degree schools is one of the most challenging problems facing our collegiate schools of nursing."

Miss Kelleher is happy that the School of Nursing was moved to the Chestnut Hill campus since this enables the faculty and students to take a more active part in University programs.

The Boston College School of Social Work, founded in 1936, recently celebrated its 25th anniversary. Carrying on the excellent work of the school is Rev. John Driscoll, S.J., who was appointed Dean in 1958.

Fr. Driscoll, a graduate of the School of Social Work, was a social worker before entering the Jesuits. Before being assigned to his present position, Fr. Driscoll was Chairman of the Department of Sociology at Boston College.

Fr. Driscoll is proud of the fine contributions his school is making in the field of social work, and of its widely representative enrollment. But he states, "we . . . realize that our recruitment efforts must be further developed if we are to attract top quality students representing a wide variety of colleges and universities."

"Our students feel the need for education as a means of advancing themselves in their jobs but also in developing their whole personality," states Rev. Charles M. Crowley, S.J., Dean of the Evening College of Arts, Sciences and Business Administration.

Fr. Crowley notes that education in the U. S. is more than adequate in fulfilling the varied needs of specialized knowledge but he feels that the education of the whole man is generally neglected. He points out that students of the Evening College are desirous for practical knowledge useful in their present vocations as wage-earners. But they are also desirous for knowledge along more liberal lines. "That's why they come to us," he asserts.

Fr. Crowley studied physics at Weston and obtained his M.S. in Physics at the University of Detroit. He spent "two happy years" at Baghdad College, during 1955-1957.

"The growth of the Evening College reflects the general growth of Boston College," he adds, "the enrollment of 850 students of a few years ago has increased to 1200 and is expected to double by 1970." The Expansion of the College will be facilitated by the expanded use of the present and future physical plant and qualified faculty."

Appointed as Dean of the Graduate School of Arts & Sciences in 1960, Father Joseph Devenny, S.J., an outstanding scholar of Middle East culture, holds his Ph.D. from Harvard University in Islamic Theology.

In speaking of the development of the Graduate School, Fr. Devenny notes that, "In 1953 there were fourteen programs leading to a Master's degree and three Doctoral programs, in Economics, Education and History. At the present time there are fifteen Master's programs and five Doctoral programs."

"It is gratifying to report," said Fr. Devenny, "that research goes forward by faculty and students, not only in the physical and social sciences, but in the humanities as well. This transpires to give abundant assurance that our Graduate School is moving as it should along the main path of University progress."

"To decry specialization in education is to misinterpret the purpose of education. The true aim of the teacher must be to impart an appreciation of method and not a knowledge of facts. This is far more readily achieved by concentrating the student's attention on a small range of phenomena, than by leading him in a rapid and superficial survey over wide fields of knowledge." This quote sums up the basic notion of the philosophy of the Graduate School of Business Administration. The man responsible for the incorporation of this notion into teaching at the School is its Dean, Vincent P. Wright.

Dr. Wright was appointed Dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration in 1956. He is justifiably proud of his school, which boasts of an enrollment of over 400, made up of many top executives of the nation's most prominent business firms. The School has attracted over five percent of the top one percent of students taking the Admission Test for Graduate Study in Business.

Dean Wright feels that, "... what is important is the development of a kind of scientific method or approach to business problems which is marked by such features as careful and accurate classification of facts and observation of their correlation and sequence. The fact that such functional relationships are elicited from a competitive structure means that interest may be whetted as results are obtained, and confidence gained as choices are confirmed by the close correlation of policies and results."

The Boston College Law School has fast become one of the most prominent schools of law in the country. The imposing stimulus behind this marked progress is the adroit Dean of the Law School, the Rev. Robert F. Drinan, S.J.

Fr. Drinan is a member of the bars of the District of Columbia, Massachusetts and the United States Supreme Court; and also a member of the Advisory Committee to the Attorney General of Massachusetts on Civil Rights and Civil Liberties.

"From a brief glance at this necessarily qualified list of the manifold interests and activities, it would seem that our Law School Dean has little time to fulfill the duties which his title implies. But this is a premature presumption. Fr. Drinan is one of the most readily available Deans on the Heights.

Fr. Drinan is especially proud of the most recent accomplishment of the Law School, "The Boston College Industrial and Commercial Law Review." This is a professional journal published by the school twice yearly.

WINTER SPORTS

HOCKEY

John "Snooks" Kelley's 1961-1962 hockey team is supposedly in what is termed a rebuilding year. Yet, the Eagles are currently sporting a 7-4-1 record.

Impressive wins have been scored over Brown, 9-2; Providence 4-3; Northeastern 10-2 and two Canadian sextettes, Laval 3-0, Queens 5-3, Dartmouth 6-3 and Clarkson 2-1. In the loss column we were edged 5-4 in overtime by St. Lawrence, 4-3 by R.P.I. and then the Larries accomplished a rare rout of a Kelley-coached team 8-1, then blanked the Eagles 4-0 on their home ice.

This second meeting with St. Lawrence was in the opening round of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) Christmas Tournament held for the first time this year. It was played in New York's Madison Square Garden and was termed a financial success by ECAC authorities.

B.U. lost 7-0 to Clarkson and the two Boston entries then tied 2-2 in the consolation game.

Certainly any team that loses a great All-American defenseman, Tom "Red" Martin; the all-time scoring ace of the college; Bill Daley; a stellar net minder Jim Logue; high scoring, hustling first line wing, Owen Hughes and speedy, veteran Bob Famigletti, would have to expect a drop from a 19-5-1 record.

(So, call this a rebuilding year if you will, but don't be surprised if "Snooks" Kelley enjoys another winning year in this, his 26th at the Heights. It would be the 25th winning year out of 26 incidentally.)

Kelley started a first line of all juniors and potentially one of the best in many years—Billy Hogan centered for Jack Leetch and Paul Aiken.

After a disappointing showing against St. Lawrence in the Christmas tournament, the coach has come up with what may be another of his famous shake-ups that pays off. It certainly has so far anyway with the trouncing of the invading teams from north of the border.

This is the way the hockey team shapes up with 2/3 of the season ahead: Captain George Grant, playing left wing on the first line with Bill Hogan and Paul Aiken. Rod O'Connor moved up from defense to center the second line for Charlie McCarthy (the people's choice) and brilliant sophomore Jack "the shot" Marsh. O'Connor, who started slowly, is looking like the Rod of old once again. Little Eddie Sullivan was moved to the third line to give it some oomph, and he sure has—along with Ken Giles and sophomore Paul Lufkin, "Snooks" now has a third line that can hold its own against any enemy line.

When the "Boston Strong Boy" big (6 ft., 200 lbs.) Jack Leetch was moved from the first line to defense, the Eagles improved almost immediately. Jack teamed up with another big Jack named Callahan (6-1, 200 lbs.) gives B.C. one of the toughest defenses to crack in college hockey. Of course, these two veterans get plenty of help from sophomores Dave Duffy, a rugged little guy who plays his heart out and who has become a crowd favorite at the Forum, and Tom Latshaw, another burly type defenseman who is improving rapidly.

The goalie situation is a pleasant one. Senior Charlie Driscoll has sparkled in the nets all season making many saves of the sensational category. His blanking of Laval must be termed perfect goal tending. Behind Charlie is a highly rated sophomore Tom Apprille. The football halfback has seen some duty to date, and done a most creditable job.

With Bucky Warren, Jr., Dick Henry, George Norberg and Tom Cloherty doing an excellent job when called on by Coach Kelley, the Eagle hockey picture is a rosy one.

BASKETBALL

Don Martin's ninth Boston College basketball team may be his best one.

The likeable Georgetown all-time great's basketball team has caught the imagination of B.C. alumni, students and fans.

Leaving for the Christmas vacation, the Eagles had won 4 and lost only 2. These were to a gigantic Providence team which has a 6-10 forward and a 6-11 center and yet they were lucky to leave Roberts Center with 77-73 verdict. The University of Connecticut also topped B.C. 78-71 with the help of some real big men.

The four wins have been over Brown 84-65, a good Yale team 109-96, Fairfield 98-77 and Maine 105-92.

Don Martin lost only one player through graduation. However, he was a good, big boy, Captain Frank Quinn, a 6-6. This meant a fine nucleus of veterans returned led by Captain Bill Foley.

Bill is a 6-3 guard from St. John's Prep. He splits starting honors with junior Jerry Power who is 6-1 from the Bronx. The remaining starters are Jim Hooley, B.C.'s all-time scoring ace who is off to another fast start and what we hope will be his greatest season. Jim has 143 points in the six games for a 23.8 average and his .549 field goal percentage rates among the nation's leaders. Teaming up with Hooley in the front court are Gerry Ward, 6-4 from the Bronx and little Billy Donovan 6-0, a Rockville Center, N.Y. product. Gerry averages 15 points per contest, has a .542 field goal percentage, is a standout on defense and rebounds with the biggest and best for a 16 per game clip.

The final member of the starting five is Charlestown's Chuck Chevalier. Chuck is only a six footer, but is as quick as a cat, a great ball handler, beautiful passer and this season in particular, a steady scorer. He has averaged 15 points a game and together with his play making and ball stealing, Chevy is invaluable to Coach Martin.

Don has a fine bench this year and can call for reserve help from Bob Boberg, a 6-5 junior, Charlie Carr, a 6-2 junior, Dave Reynolds and Bob DeGrass, both 6-6 juniors.

Three sophomores from last year's fine freshman team round out the Eagle squad. All three have the ability to come through when the time comes and they are Bob Madigan, 6-5, 230 lbs. from Matignon High School; George Fitzsimmons, 6-2, 190 lbs. all the way from St. Louis, Missouri, and Frank Richichi, 6-5, 220 lbs. from White Plains, New York.

Only six of the 22 games have been played to date, and some of the tougher opponents lie ahead, but don't be surprised if the Martin-men go on to a most successful season.

CLUB NOTES

Fort Sill, Oklahoma

With large numbers of our younger graduates entering the service, a group of our Army Eagles have recently formed a B.C. Club at this military installation. Led by Captain JAMES L. KELLEY, JR., '54, President; Capt. JOSEPH A. DANIELI, JR., '56, Treasurer and Lt. WILLIAM J. PERRON, JR., '60, Secretary, the club members hold regular monthly meetings on the post and a group traveled to Lubbock, Texas for the Texas Tech Game.

Baltimore

Congratulations to the newest member on the roster of Boston College Clubs! After some fine organizational work by JOE O'BRIEN, '53, during the past summer and fall, this new club held its first formal social the eve of the Holy Cross game. In the initial election, the following were elected: JOSEPH G. O'BRIEN, '53, President; JOSEPH T. McKUSKER, '53, Vice-Pres.; ANNE L. O'BRIEN, N '56, Secretary-Treasurer and JOSEPH D. LONERGAN, '54, Program Chairman. Elected as trustees were: HERBERT N. McCAULEY, '54, ALBERT J. SHAUGHNESSY, '49, JOSEPH P. DINAN, '50 and JAMES MULLEN, '53. Additional activities were planned at a business meeting in January and a number of the members traveled to Annapolis for the B.C.-Navy basketball game. Newly arrived alumni in the Baltimore area are urged to contact President O'Brien (home: CL 4-0799, Office: LE 9-6476) so that they may join in future club activities.

Springfield

President JOE CANCELLIERE announces that the annual Rector's dinner will take place on Wednesday, January 24 at Betty's Town House in Agawam, beginning with a champagne cocktail hour at 6:30. The annual club sports night will be held on Friday, March 2, with details to be announced later.

Maine

On November 30, the Boston College men of Maine held their annual meeting at which the following officers were named for the coming year: PHILIP J. DAWSON, '56, President; MICHAEL J. TALIENTO, '57, Vice-President; JOHN J. O'LEARY, '50, Treasurer, with FREDERICK C. ROBINSON, '50, reelected as Secretary. Many members of the Club attended the B.C.-University of Maine game which was followed by a social at Vallee's in Portland. JOHN KEANEY and MIKE GOULDING are co-chairmen of the annual Rector's night, to be held the evening of January 25.

Worcester

The annual children's Christmas party, under the chairmanship of EDNA MACHEWICZ, '56, and BARBARA HOWARD, '57, took place December 17 at the Hillcrest Country Club, and was attended by over 75 alumni and children. Early in December the following new officers were elected: BOB MILLER, '34, President; JACK CURRAN, '51, 1st Vice-President; BILL MASTERSON, '52, 2nd Vice-President, DICK COURTNEY, L'50, Treasurer and MARILYN CHARD, '54, was reelected Secretary.

Washington

In the annual business meeting held at the Touchdown Club, the following officers were elected for the coming year: FRANCIS X. McLAUGHLIN, '50, President; CDR.

TERRENCE GRIFFIN, USNR, '38, Vice-President; JOHN W. GUNN, JR., '51, Secretary-Treasurer. In addition ED GORMAN, '36, was named Membership Chairman and FRANK CRONIN, '42, Publicity Chairman. The club sponsored its annual Christmas children's party, holds a monthly luncheon at the Touchdown Club and is planning for the Laetare Sunday Communion breakfast.

Connecticut

The annual meeting took place on December 6 at the Colonial House in Hamden. The feature of the evening was the showing of the H.C. game film by former backfield coach Gene Gibson. New officers elected for the coming year are: AL ALESSI, '50, BOB OWENS, '48, GEORGE GRIFFIN, '50, and BOB McGURKIN, '56. President Al Alessi announces that plans are being made to reserve tickets for the Yale game on February 7. Interested alumni can send a check for $2.00 to Al for a reserved seat in the B.C. section.

Chicago

Under the able direction of HERB CHERNACK, '39, with a fine assist from WALLACE CARROLL, '28, the club sponsored an excellent buffet party for visiting alumni prior to the Northwestern game and entertained the slightly damp and downhearted Eagle fans at a cocktail party following the game.

New Jersey - New York - Long Island

On successive nights in early December, these clubs played host to former Coach ERNIE HEFFERLE and Alumni Relations Director TOM MURRAY, for the annual showing of the Holy Cross game films. Many thanks are due to PAUL MICALI (N.J.), BOB HALLORAN (N.Y.) and NORM MURRAY (L.I.) for their arrangements and hospitality.

Los Angeles - San Francisco

When FR. FRANCIS MACKIN, S.J., Assistant to the President made a trip West in December, our coast alumni played host at receptions in the two cities in honor of his visit. San Francisco Club held its reception at the Officer's Club, Hunter's Point, through the courtesy of JOHN ROAKE and President GEORGE CLINTON. The Los Angeles club had its reception at Michael's Restaurant in Hollywood and many thanks are due JACK FAHEY, '51 who so ably made the arrangements in the absence of club president JOE CARTY, '60.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK CELEBRATES 25th ANNIVERSARY

L. to R., Sen. Edmund Muskie, V. Rev. Michael P. Walsh, S.J., Rev. John V. Driscoll, S. J.,
Mr. Edward B. Hanify.

Convinced of the need for social workers to care for the problem of growing communities, the Boston College School of Social Work was established in 1936, under the guidance of its first Dean, Rev. Walter McGuinn, S.J.

Over the past twenty-five years, the School has kept abreast of the very latest developments in the profession and is ranked with the finest of the social work schools in the nation. Large numbers of its graduates today hold positions of executive responsibility in many communities throughout the country.

A former director of field work at the School, Miss Dorothy Book succeeded Father McGuinn as Dean after the latter's death in 1944. Rev. Richard P. Burke, S.J. was later named Dean until 1958, when the present Dean, Rev. John V. Driscoll, S.J., was appointed to this post. Father Driscoll received his Master's degree from the School in 1941, and later studied at the Gregorian University in Rome, where he obtained his doctorate in 1957.

On the evening of November 11, the School celebrated its 25th Anniversary with a banquet at the Sheraton Plaza. Mr. Edward B. Hanify, a member of the Advisory Board was the toastmaster and Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine whose topic was "Education and Social Responsibility" was the principal speaker.

Very Rev. Michael P. Walsh, Rev. John Driscoll and Monsignor Francis J. Lally also addressed the school's alumni gathered at this banquet.

NEWS

FROM THE CLASSES

THE OLD GUARD

Mr. and Mrs. HENRY T. POWERS of Rockville Centre, New York celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary during November. They were married Nov. 14, 1911 at St. Peter's church, Dorchester by the late Rev. Michael J. Danahy (1905).

There are three children and eight grandchildren now living and two of the grandchildren are at B. C., Bill McDonald a junior and Mike McDonald a freshman and a third Peter now a Junior at Regis in Denver.

A Mass of Thanksgiving was offered at St. Agnes Cathedral by the Rt. Rev. Thomas H. Kennedy, Pastor of St. Joseph's church in Needham.

A reception held at their daughter's home, Mrs. William F. McDonald was attended by many relations and friends. Among the B. C. men present were some "old timers," JIM COVENEY, '10; GEORGE LEONARD, '11; JOHN SARGENT, '18 and FRED GANNON, '23.

Father Rector and Henry's old classmate, REV. JAMES DOLAN, S.J. offered Masses at the College for the continued blessings and many more years to share in the progress and development of Boston College.

'12 STEPHEN H. MAHONEY 5 Bellevue Ave., Cambridge

The sympathy of the class is extended to STEVE MAHONEY whose good wife, Marietta, passed away on November 19, 1961. Besides her husband, she is survived by four children, Sister Stephen Marie, S.S.N.D., Principal of St. Peter's High School, Cambridge; Sister Marietta, S.N.D. of the faculty of Emmanuel College; Marietta R. and Stephen H., Jr.

'14 JOHN S. KEOHANE 1147 Tremont St., Boston

On September 8, Rev. JOSEPH F. BUSAM, S.J. celebrated his Fiftieth Anniversary in the Society of Jesus which he entered August 14, 1911. Present at the Jubilee Mass were Bishop Flanagan of Worcester and Bishop ERIC F. MacKENZIE of Boston, his classmate. Afterwards a reception was tendered him by his many relatives and friends present. Having been Professor of Biology and Spanish at Boston College and Canisius, he was appointed head of the Biology Department of Holy Cross College in 1929 which assignment he still holds. Dr. FRANK DEVLIN and JOHN KEOHANE also represented the Class. On October 12 at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston Father JOE celebrated a Mass in honor of Columbus Day and was congratulated by Cardinal Cushing on his fifty years in the Society and his thirty years as Chaplain of the Knights of Columbus at Holy Cross College. John Keohane's nephew Rev. John J. Geoghan was Deacon of the Mass. AD MULTOS FELICISSIMOS ANNOS, Father Joe!

On October 20 Bishop ERIC F. MacKENZIE and Monsignor TIM GLEASON celebrated the Forty-Third Anniversary of their Ordination. Congratulations to both of our classmates.

Rev. John Leander Hurl, S.J., son of our late beloved classmate DAN HURLD is a Major in the United States Army stationed in Okinawa. DAN'S daughter, Sister Ann Louise, S.N.D., teaches music at Notre Dame Academy in Roxbury.

JIM DUNBAR'S son, Paul '51, has been made Sales Manager of Monsanto Chemical Company in New York. He is the father of three children and resides in New Jersey.

Born to JACK KAPPLES' son, John Jr., December 9, a boy and second son.

Died November 13, WALTER C. HICKEY, a classmate for two years at the College. May his soul rest in peace.

Born to BILL O'SULLIVAN'S son, Frank '55, a son, David, in September and BILL'S twelfth grandchild.

Born August 25 JOHN KEOHANE'S eighteenth grandchild, a son, to Thomas and Marjory Keohane.

Sincere congratulations are due to the leader of our Band and all its members for the magnificent showing they made throughout the football season and for their playing at the hockey games. In our opinion no band of any other college surpassed nor even equalled the performance of our band at the games. Well done, Boys!

'15 JOHN J. WALSH 15 Pondview Ave., Jamaica Plain

Members of the Class of 1915 were shocked to hear of the sudden death of our beloved classmate, JAMES P. HOPKINS. Jim has always been active in class and alumni matters and will be sincerely missed by his classmates.

MONSIGNOR LAWRENCE P. MORRISROE, late pastor of St. William's Church in Dorchester, was buried on December 12th. Many of our classmates were present at the funeral Mass, which was celebrated by another classmate, MONSIGNOR JAMES F. GRIMES.

Sincere sympathy of the class is extended to the members of both families.

ROBERT J. BURNS is back at his office after a recent illness.

GEORGE CASEY and his wife, the former Lillian Harrington of Roxbury, attended the recent meeting of the Los Angeles B. C. Club at Michael's Restaurant in Hollywood. His wife was active in the movies in the silent era.

'16 JAMES L. O'BRIEN 41 Pond Circle, Jamaica Plain

We all suffered a severe loss in the death of our most loyal classmate, ARTHUR FALVEY. He was the spark of the Class. Arthur was generous of his time and energy and had all the qualities of a real Catholic gentleman. We were truly fortunate to have known him for fifty years. May you always remember him in your prayers.

JOE SHEEHAN'S son is now teaching in the Armed Services School at Okinawa.

DR. HEFFERNAN had a most enjoyable trip to Vienna where he attended the International Congress of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

LT. COL. FRANCIS K. HINCHEY of Rockville Centre has retired from the U.S.A.F.

'17 THOMAS D. CRAVEN 107 Barrett St., Needham

FR. MAURICE DULLEA, S.J. is looking forward to his return to the classroom for the second semester. He underwent an operation during the summer and has been recuperating for the last few months.

WALTER DURNAN has returned from a trip which carried him into the Holy Land, Greece, Italy, Switzerland and other countries on the Continent. While in Rome, he had an audience with Pope John XXIII. He reports the arrival of his tenth grandchild. Son, Vincent, is now teaching in the high school in North Conway, N. H.

FR. JOHN MORRISSEY whom many of us have not seen in several years is Pastor of St. Paul's Church, Wellesley, to which he went from St. Francis de Sales Church, Roxbury. Prior to that assignment he served as secretary to Bishop Desmond of the Diocese of Alexandria, La.

DR. CY LYDON informs us that daughter, Mary, (Mrs. Welch), has four children attending St. Paul's School, Wellesley, under the supervision of FR. MORRISSEY.

PORKY FLYNN has a new interest in life. He is learning to play the claviera which son, Fr. John, had picked up in Italy and played recently for CARDINAL CUSHING at the annual Thanksgiving Dinner at Blinstrub's.

FATHER "BILL" HARRINGTON has been elevated to the rank of domestic prelate with the title of Right Reverend Monsignor. We extend to him our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for many happy years to enjoy his honor.

Father "Bill" was ordained at St. Bernard's Seminary, Rochester, N. Y. on May 26, 1923. After assignments at Sacred Heart Parish, Oak Bluffs and at St. Louis Parish, Fall River, he was named in 1930 as Director of Diocesan Charities. His first pastorate was that of St. Thomas More Parish, Somerset. Since 1955 he has been pastor of Holy Name Parish, Fall River.

The Class met for its 42nd reunion and dinner in October and while the gathering was few in number, it was an enthusiastic group and voted to retain its annual assembly until the last of the Forty Thieves passes on.

Within two weeks, two members of the Class passed away. WILLIAM (DEMO) DEMPSEY, who attended the reunion and was one of our most beloved classmates and REV. JOHN JOHNSON, pastor of Corpus Christi in Auburndale.

Within the month we lost JOHN WELCH, an ex-'20 man but as loyal a B.C. man the Class had. In a recent note from Grace Welch she said in part, "we shall always remember your thoughtfulness one and all." The sympathy of the Class is extended to Mrs. Welch and to the families of EUGENE McCABE, who died suddenly just before Christmas and JOSEPH GAVIN who died Dec. 16. May they rest in peace.

Judge JOHN SULLIVAN of the Brighton Municipal Court is President of the Particular Council of the St. Vincent de Paul Society. JOHN was one of the speakers at the recent celebration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Society in Boston. The meeting was held at the Statler Hilton Hotel.

JOE FLYNN has been appointed a Director of the B.C. Alumni Association for 1961-1962.

Asst. Superintendent WILLIAM J. CUNNINGHAM served as Chairman of the High School UNESCO Conference held recently at the Abraham Lincoln School in Boston. EVERETT FORD is teaching at an academy in Waterville, Maine.

JIMMY FITZPATRICK is in charge of the Municipal Stadium in Portland, Maine, in addition to his teaching duties at Portland High School.

WALTER CREMEN'S boy, Walter, Junior, is in the service at the Great Lakes Naval Station.

There was a nice item in the Record-American recently about CHARLEY COYLE, Executive Secretary of the Massachusetts and Boston Hotel Associations.

The sympathy of the Class is extended to Fr. JIM GLENNON and his family on the death of his father, Thomas Glennon.

The sympathy of the class is also extended to FRANK MORRISSEY and his family on the death of his brother, William, B.C., '26.

St. Michael's College seniors will dedicate their yearbook to DR. FRANK QUINLAN, one of the men most responsible for St. Michael's notable success in producing scientists. DR. QUINLAN, chairman of the Chemistry Department and a veteran of more than 25 years of teaching, will receive the dedication of the 1962 edition of The Shield. He and Mrs. Quinlan have two children, Virginia, an airline hostess, and Francis, a graduate of St. Michael's College and a high school teacher in North Adams, Mass.

Almost all the news of the Class is bad—we report with sorrow the passing of many of our classmates at B. C. and at old B. C. High. 1918 men who have passed on since the last issue of Alumni News include CHARLES FOLEY, long a Civil Service Commissioner at the State House and REV. FRANCIS A. HUGAL, S.J., professor of religion at Holy Cross. Both were well beloved men among us. In '22 we regret the passing of REV. CORNELIUS MASON, late pastor of St. Mary's church in Randolph. FR. MASON, his new parochial school just ready for construction, died in November. FR. WILLIAM P. CONLEY of the class preached a beautiful eulogy. Many classmates including RT. REV. JAMES DOYLE were on the altar. Still on the sad side is the news of the deaths by accidents of the daughters of both STEPHEN VELARDO and LAWRENCE CURTIN. Then, too, JOHN CONNELL, fullback on Frank Morrissey's 1918 team, passed away in December.

In happier mood we report that FR. HANNAS, S.J., whom we recall as Mr. Hannas, a flaming red-head 45 years ago, is still functioning well. He is on the mission band in Kingston, Jamaica, B.W.I., and recently attended the wedding of Harrison Hobbs, B. C. '59. We were all envious of Everett Superintendent of Schools, WILLIAM CANTY, on his junket with the Everett football team to Miami where the champions did such a splendid job for New England football. A happy occasion is the weekly dinner enjoyed by CHARLES COLLINS, a tradition that the two classmates have made a habit almost since commencement in 1922. A special note from me to FR. CONNERS is that the Hasenfus have now eleven grandchildren, the new arrival being a daughter to our Barbara. A gala occasion was the testimonial dinner tendered to ARTHUR FRAWLEY, long time mayor of Lynn and a true gentleman who had devoted 24 years to public life. The dinner held Dec. 13, was attended by 500 friends who sang well-merited praises of ARTHUR. "Integrity" was the keynote of each speech and it is wonderful to see one of our own so honored. In the public eye too, is CHESTER PRIOR, recently appointed to the Newton Planning Board and the Board of Park Commissioners by Mayor Donald Gibbs of Newton. Peter, youngest son of WILLIAM SHEEHAN, is a Freshman at St. Michael's College in Vermont, and already the young fellow is showing his exceptional skill as a skier.

ED GARRITY and Mrs. Garrity have been travelling extensively—after a trip out to Arizona they have just returned from a visit to Denmark, Holland and Sweden, having been in Oslo at the time of the funeral of Dag Hammarskjöld.

Among those of the Class attending the Jubilee Mass and reception for Fr. John A. Tobin, S.J. were ED DULLEA, MATT BUTLER, TONY COMERFORD and your secretary. It was a wonderful occasion and one that will be remembered.

JOE SWEENEY has been named to head the Alumni Special Gifts Committee of B.C.'s 100th Anniversary Development Program. CECIL MCGOLDRICK is also working very diligently on this same committee.

GAYNOR WELLINGS and his wife spent the Christmas holidays in Philadelphia.

GEORGE OLSEN's son, George Jr. was recently married to Miss Maureen Dillon of Worcester and also was the successful candidate in the Cambridge School Committee campaign.

We have just recently heard of the death of our Classmate FRED OBERHAUSER—many of you may have missed it too. May we extend the sympathy of the Class to Mrs. Oberhauser.

To DR. LEN MORRISSEY we also extend our sincere sympathy on the recent loss of his brother Bill, one of those famous B.C. Morrisseys.

Also to MYLES MCSWEENEY and his family the Class extends its heartfelt sympathy on the recent death of his only daughter, Mrs. Virginia Daugherty. Requiescat in Pace.

How about that little assistance you were to give to your Secretary—believe me, I could use a little!

To assist him in a valiant effort to avoid writing about his own family, please, oh please, send him a story about yourself—the names and ages of your children and grandchildren, where you're living and what your doing.

unfortunately became lost so I am worse off than the B.C. Football Team was about the middle of the 2nd quarter. Here's the first start on an effort as brave a recovery as theirs, with yours truly as fifth-string quarterback.

JOE CASEY retired from Humble Oil & Refining Co. a year ago and is busily engaged in hunting and fishing around his home city of Baytown, Texas.

MR. & MRS. SYLVESTER CONNELLY are back in Hingham after a trip to Europe a couple of summers ago, and MR. is back in the groove as top salesman in Jordan Marsh's furniture department. Their oldest daughter was married a year ago, and Brenda will be engaged to Frank Barone, B.C. '55, as we go to press. I don't know what you call short-wave hams after they've had a license for 43 years but whatever they graduate into with all that experience—SYL is it. He has station WLBW going all hours of the night talking to spots as diversified as Moose Jaw, Timbuctoo and Moscow. He has lots of fun, chats with Bulgarian night after night; phone River-view 9-8207 for the latest dope.

ED MURPHY, one of the most loyal members of the Varsity Club, is Assistant Headmaster of Cambridge High & Latin. He gave us all a head start in marriage but he was a great finisher in track 38 years ago and he hasn't changed. He refused to give the ages of his two girls, a boy and two girls, in that order but ye scribe's close estimate is that they range from 10 to 4.

BILL FOLEY is Master of Longfellow School in Cambridge. He can be seen at every B.C. football game with his son, Dick, in his Junior year at A&S. His oldest, Miriam, teaches in Winchester and his second, Bill, Jr., a Wentworth grad, married a year ago and is a draughtsman at Payne Elevator Co.

Thirty members were present at the 37th annual Communion Breakfast of the Class on Low Sunday Mass which was celebrated in St. Mary's Chapel by Fr. John Tobin, S.J., as has been his custom for years. The Class was tendered a sumptuous breakfast, preceded by champagne, at the Brae Burn Country Club by CHRIS DUNCAN.

On board U. S. Cadet Training Ship Emire State IV in the Port of Southampton, England, on July 4, 120 guests from town and port drank a toast to "Anglo-American Understanding and Partnership" in celebration of Independence Day as guests of Mr. JAMES F. GRADY, U. S. Consul. Since Jim was unable to arrange the usual reception on July 4 at his home at Heathersett, Chilworth, he telegraphed the Mayors and Town Clerks in his consular district and those who were unable to "make ship" drank a similar toast in 53 cities and towns. We have been unable to find out whether they used Scotch. John Marshall Grady, Jim's 19 year old son, now a Sophomore in A&S was Guest of Honor along with the Mayor and the Sheriff of Southampton, since Independence Day is his birthday. After he graduates from B.C., John hopes to follow in his father's footsteps in the U. S. Foreign Service.

Pray for the souls of THOMAS KELLER, MSGR. GEORGE DOWD, JOHN BURCHILL, HENRY LANNIN, J. BURKE SULLIVAN and THOMAS MCINTIRE, our most recent dead.

'26 WILLIAM J. CUNNINGHAM 40 Tennyson St., W. Roxbury

Here we go again. Somehow, after doing these notes all these years, one gets the feeling that he's writing about the same people all the time! That's your fault, you know. Drop us a line. Met PAUL SULLIVAN, now living in West Roxbury; very happy that his son is a student Jesuit; Paul looks the same. An early November Herald Society note told us that JOHN HART CLINTON'S daughter Mary Ann was married in San Francisco to Christopher Gardner, Jr., a Tufts grad getting his master's at Stanford. Mary Ann is a Stanford grad, too. If you get to San Francisco, be sure to look up John Hart; had a most pleasant visit with him two years ago. He lives in San Mateo.

From here on, all I can tell you about are the people I've met at games. At the Harvard frosh game at the Stadium, MURRAY REGAN, ART GORMAN and BOB DALEY did their usual rabid rooting. Boy, did I get the business for praising a nice bit of football by the opposition! Then the next day at the Iowa State game, met FRANK COLLINS whom none of us have seen for some time. He's as handsome as ever; had his 15-year-old son with him and promised most solemnly to appear at the annual dinner. I had slipped out from a wedding reception to catch the good second half of that game and bumped into BILL LYONS and PHIL DELAHUNT on the way out.

Been working on a Chevy deal for ED HARRISON. Ed lives in Brookline and works for Sutherland Paper. Young Ed just graduated from the Heights and is a bigger boy than his dad ever was.

Rose and I took advantage of the invitation to look over McElroy Commons at the Open House. Met my next door neighbor in the Senior Assembly Hall, JOHN A. CROWLEY of Roxbury, whom none of us have seen for many years. John married Mary Keaveney, whom he was squiring while still a student; they both looked very well.

Also at McElroy we met Mr. and Mrs. DOC CASEY of Cambridge and Mr. and Mrs. JOHN MISKELLA. Then Mr. and Mrs. ARTHUR MURRAY came along and all of us were proud of this handsome new building. Remember when we had to go down behind the lockers if we wanted a smoke? The lounges, and foyer were actually glamorous and the "Eagles' Nest" snack bar, open till eleven nightly, were beautiful. The main dining room, barber shop, faculty dining room and lounges, student activity rooms and the bookstore left one agape. If you haven't yet seen it, by all means do. Then up your ante a little bit on your contribution for this year, won't you?

At the Providence hockey game saw MURRAY, DALEY, GORMAN and REGAN. Arthur's quite proud of the fact that he is now a grandpop. Daughter Marjorie had a son in early December; married to a young doctor at the Carney and I'll catch it from Art for forgetting his name. Art is still as entertaining and dangerous to sit near at a hockey game as he ever was. It's a good team but looks as if it misses Bob's boy Billy; how he could go. We have no dope on a date for the annual dinner, but we'll be in touch. Come to this one. Remember—it's later than you think. Chatted with FRANK RIHA a couple of times recently. In his capacity as office manager of the Donnelly Corporation, he is very interested in a series of tests which the Boston schools are giving in cooperation with the National Office Managers' Association. Frank is quite active in that group. His daughter, a B. C. grad, is a buyer at Filene's on the South Shore, and his son, a Maryknoll student, is due home for a brief Christmas visit this year. That winds it up, gang; wish there were more.

'27 JOHN J. BUCKLEY 20 Dell Ave., Hyde Park

The annual Christmas Class Reunion was held Thursday evening, Dec. 28, 1961, at Alumni Hall with 35 of the brothers in attendance. Those present were: MSGR. JOHN FEENEY, MSGR. WALTER LEACH, MSGR. JOSEPH LYONS, FR. JOSEPH MCCALL, FR. JAMES GEARY, S.J., FR. BERNARD FIEKERS, S.J., JOE MCKENNEY, RAY FINNEGAN, DR. TIM LYONS, WALTER WALDRON, TOM O'KEEFE, TOM HEFFERNAN, DR. JOHN CICHETTI, JOE HOPKINSON, TOM KEEFE, TOM COUGHLIN, DR. JOHN CARROLL, MARTIN TIERNEY, VIN O'CONNELL, JIM CONNORS, JIM COTTER, JOHN E. (REVERE) SULLIVAN, BILL MARNELL, JACK DUANE, JOHN CAVANAUGH, FRANK REGAN, FRED HARKINS, HOWIE BUCKLEY, LUKE MCCLOSKEY, PAUL SEYMOUR, JOHN O'HARA, DAN O'LEARY, JOE INGOLDSBY, JOHN TOOMEY, FRANCIS X. SULLIVAN, and JACK BUCKLEY.

President FRANK SULLIVAN announced the appointment of JOE MCKENNEY as General Chairman of the Thirty-Fifth Anniversary committee to be assisted by DR. TIM LYONS, Chairman of the Family Communion Sunday Program, and HOWARD BUCKLEY, Chairman of Alumni Week Activities.

FRED HARKINS' daughter is teaching in Connecticut.

FRANK REGAN's son is a Sophomore at (excuse it, please) Holy Cross.

Add to the New Grandfathers Club JIM COTTER and LUKE MCCLOSKEY.

JIM COTTER's daughter is a student at Salem State College.

HENRY FARLEY recently won high distinction in receiving the St. George's

The Alumni

Medal for his outstanding work in the Boy Scouts.

MARTIN TIERNEY's daughter, Sally, is a Soph at the Boston College School of Nursing.

DAN O'LEARY's daughter, Nancy is now studying at the Boston College Graduate School.

TOM HEFFERNAN's son, Tom Jr., is pursuing his graduate studies in English Literature at the University of Manchester, England. One of Tom's daughters is at Emanuel College and another at the College of the Sacred Heart.

JOHN O'CONNELL, formerly with the FBI, is now President of the Distillers Institute of America with headquarters in the Far West.

JOE MCKENNEY is proud of his eleven grandchildren and also of his son, Billy, whose punting was of tremendous value to this year's varsity football team.

FATHER JIM NORMILE is a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Air Force. He is now stationed in Texas and is within two years of retirement.

RAY FINNEGAN's daughter, a graduate of Boston College School of Nursing, is teaching at the Catherine Laboure School of Nursing.

WALTER WALDRON's son is studying at the North American College in Rome and (good omen) is occupying Msgr. WALTER LEACH's old quarters.

JACK BUCKLEY's Number Five boy, recently graduated from B.C. High, is studying at the Maryknoll Seminary at Glen Ellyn, Illinois.

DR. DANIEL H. O'LEARY worked for the State Department last summer in Venezuela as the education expert in a team of three, education, economics, and agriculture. These gentlemen made a survey of Venezuela's needs in these fields and submitted a 290 page report to the Secretary of State. Dan talked with the educational leaders of the country as well as with many professors and students of all political beliefs. He sees an increase in trained personnel as the country's greatest need. Dan found all avenues open to him as his name is also the name of Venezuela's great liberator, General Daniel O'Leary. In answer to questions from the floor at the Christmas Dinner Dan admitted that he and the celebrated Liberator belong to the same family. Dan offered as proof the fact that his father, grand old patriarch still active at 91, was born on a farm in Inchegeela, County Cork, which had been the birth site of the renowned Generalissimo. I, for one, believe the story. Dynastic successions have been based on less. To end this little item on an official note, let me say that the program of the State Department which was so signally forwarded by Dr. Dan's work is called ALIANZA PARA EL PROGRESO. Hasta la vista, muchachos!

With a heavy heart I wrote these notes on the death of my wife, Virginia, on November 9. A solemn Requiem Mass was said on November 13 for the repose of her soul by Msgr. James Doyle at St. Peter's Church, Dorchester. Rev. John Connor, Pastor of St. Clare's, Braintree Highlands, was present on the altar. From the bottom of my heart I thank all my classmates, priests, alumni, and friends for their kind expression of sympathy.

The Class was saddened on the death of DR. ART SLINNEY who died last August. The Class extends their sympathy.

Sincere condolences and prayers for Several of the boys made the trip to Chicago for the Northwestern-Boston College game. DAN DRISCOLL, DICK CONDON, JIM DUFFY and BOBBY OTT were the guests of WALLACE CARROLL—the Mid-West tycoon. A good time was had by all, especially the festive dinner, etc.

FR. LEO McCANN after many years in the service as chaplain is now pastor of a new parish—St. Gerard's, Canton, Mass. Another priest classmate, FR. CHRIS O'NEILL, former director of Catholic Charitable Bureau in Lynn, was made pastor of St. Charles Parish in Woburn.

It has been reported that DR. JOSEPH DOYLE and JOHN MORIARTY of Union Carbide Co., New York, who were on for the St. Lawrence-B. C. hockey game, are riding around in Mercedes Benz cars. Upper Bracket Boys.

In the past we have had a good turnout for the Alumni Communion Breakfast on Laetare Sunday. Make it a point to attend this affair when the announcement is made.

Thanks to Bob Greene '60 of Milton, a Lay Missionary who has been teaching at Mt. Carmel High School, Annotto Bay, Jamaica, West Indies since September, 1960 for bringing us up to date on FR. NEIL DONAHUE, S.J. On one of his journeys around Jamaica, Bob came across a newly erected sign at Our Lady of Fatima Church, Jamaica's first Church. The sign exhibited the hours of Masses during the week and also contained "Fr. Neil Donahue, S.J., Pastor, Boston College 1930." Father Neil has acquired fame as a gracious host to Boston visitors to Jamaica. Best wishes from your classmates, Fr. Neil, for your continued success in the missionary field in Jamaica.

JUDGE JOHN J. CONNELLY was honored as Man of the Year as co-recipient with Governor John A. Volpe at the annual testimonial dinner of the Crosscup-Pishon Post of the American Legion at Boston last October in recognition of his outstanding leadership in the field of juvenile guidance.

The sincere sympathy of all his classmates is extended to FRANK TALLINO and his family upon the recent loss of his brother, Fr. Daniel Taglino, who was stationed at the Sacred Heart Church in East Boston.

Honorable JOHN W. MCINTYRE of Attleboro is heading up the Alumni Special Gifts Committee in the Attleboro area.

ED O'NEIL's son, Ed Jr., is enjoying dormitory life at the Heights where he is a member of the Freshman class.

JOHN J. GRANDFIELD has been appointed a member of the Promotion Board of the Boston Postal District.

DR. TOM CAVANAUGH and CHARLIE MURPHY tried out the Bermuda courses in the International Goodwill Golf Tournament early in December. They find that the putting greens are better at the Charles River and Woodland courses.

JOHN W. HAVERTY is heading up the General Alumni Fund Drive Committee in the Brighton area.

We were saddened when we heard of the recent death of FR. TOM CROWELL who died suddenly in Erie, Penn., where he was pastor. FR. TOM was buried from St. Thomas Church in Jamaica Plain. FR. FRANK FINNEGAN was the Deacon and FR. BOB COSTELLO attended the Mass.

BILL COOGAN has two sons at B.C. Bill, Jr., a Junior and Jimmy a Freshman.

TOM CONNELLY's son, Tommy, is in the Junior Class and is also on the Varsity Track Team.

The sympathy of the class is extended to MR. and MRS. HARRY DOWNES whose son recently died at the age of 17 years. Harry's son, Harry, Jr., is an end on the B.C. Varsity Football Team.

JACK PATTEN has been appointed Assistant Vice President—Sales Staff of the New York Central Railroad. Jack has a son in the Freshman Class at B.C.

Your correspondent's parents celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. Agatha's Church, Milton on Nov. 25, 1961. Several of our classmates were present on this joyous occasion. Among those who came to congratulate the Bride and Groom of fifty years, were MSGR. WALTER FLAHERTY, FR. BILL NOONAN, FR. FRANK DOHERTY, FR. MARTY DOLPHIN and FR. GEORGE WILLIAMS. Also present were DAN CRONIN, TIM DONOHUE and JIM SULLIVAN.

FR. JOHN COGAVIN sends his regards to the Class from San Antonio, Texas. FR. JOHN is a professor of Theology at the Incarnate Word College, a very excellent Catholic college for women, at San Antonio. He gave his all for the Eagle's cause at Houston on Oct. 7.

The condolences of his classmates are extended to ANDY MURPHY on the recent death of his mother.

We hope and trust that RALPH WHELAN is back on the road to complete recovery after his recent setback.

And it's nice to see JIM CLERKIN back on the active list and looking in the prime.

DR. JOHN H. GRIFFIN, Hughesville, Maryland, writes to say that he is justifiably proud of his election to the Supreme Board of Directors of the Knights of Columbus, but would like to clarify and pull the reins on the press release re same, which had him a former football star at Boston College. Says the grid aspect of the story is probably attributable to the fact that the writer is a Notre Dame grad.

Captain TONY DEVICO, USN, has recently been assigned to the position of Assistant Judge Advocate General for Personnel, Reserve and Planning in Washington, D. C. Tony is a member of the Federal Bar, for the District of Boston, the American Bar Association, the Massachusetts Bar Association, and is also admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court and the U. S. Court of Military Appeals.

And while on Navy honors to classmates, CHICK FEATHERSTONE was awarded the Meritorious Public Service Citation by the Secretary of the Navy, for his outstanding service to the Department of the Navy in promoting an increased civic awareness of the role of the U. S. Navy in the national defense effort.

We make no claims of omniscience, and even with a triple checking system we're no doubt subject to errors of omission. If such are made please put us straight and we'll be happy to correct in the next issue. But could it be that '35 has set another record, this time for having the most sons and daughters enrolled at the Heights? JOHN GRIFFIN'S son is a Freshman, VP of A&S; JIM McLAUGHLIN'S son is a Freshman, A&S; MIKE COLLINS has two, Mike a Junior, John a Freshman; MIKE GERSON has a Sophomore son; BOB DUFFY, two daughters; LEO CHANE, a son; DAN HOLLAND, a Freshman daughter; DR. JOE RILEY, Freshman son; FRANK LIDDELL, Sophomore son; NICK FRANEY, one grad and one student; AL ROONEY, a son; GERRY COURNOYER, a Sophomore son; HANK GRODEN, son and daughter, and your struggling correspondent's Junior, a Junior, VP of A&S.

The following is the lull—after the storm of our 25th:

Congratulations to SID DUNN on his election to President of the Volunteer Co-operative Bank of Boston. Sid has been a director and general counsel of the bank for 15 years.

Congratulations also to JOE HARVEY who recently was named Town Solicitor for Winthrop. JOE, who is court reporter for the Boston Globe, is qualified to practice law before the State, Federal and U. S. Supreme courts.

ART O'CONNOR of Medford is recovering from major surgery. ART is in government contract work for Army Ordinance.

ED FURBUSH, formerly of Waltham, is in business out on the West Coast. ED, many have been asking about you—drop me a line.

Good news on CHARLIE MARSOE—he's back in good health and teaching in Natick.

Congratulations to CHRIS IANNELLA on his election as President of the Boston City Council.

FRANK METZ has been appointed senior staff engineer at the Data Systems Division in California.

CORNELIUS OWENS has been appointed Perating Vice President of the New York Telephone Co.

P.S.—All wives of 36'ers who at 25th Reunion activities promised to send me news of their husbands—this is a reminder, send along that news.

Cornelius W. Owens, '36, Operating Vice-President, New York Telephone Co.

Our Silver Jubilee Year is off to an auspicious start under the guidance of General Chairman TEDDY GLYNN and a large and representative 25th Reunion Committee. 85 members participated in an hilarious reunion dinner at Alumni Hall on November 30 under the Chairmanship of GEORGE CURTIN and genial IOE MURRAY, your favorite toastmaster. REVEREND JOHN A. TOBIN, Honorary member of the Class was the guest of honor. A group photograph by JOE P. O'BRIEN is being mailed to all members of the Class as evidence of the success of the dinner.

The Class Committee has prepared a sparkling variety of events for the year. Next on the program came the 25th Reunion Skating Party for 1937 families at McHugh Forum on January 7. Co-chairmen for this affair were JACK BURGESS, TOM McDERMOTT and PETE MURPHY. A Fathers and Sons hockey game and skating exhibition featured the party. A St. Patrick's Day Supper Dance is planned for March. A Laetare Sunday Communion Breakfast Reunion April 1 will keep the Class members busy in preparation for the wonderful reunion week schedule in June. Every effort is being made to guarantee maximum attendance and participation, and to make the year a memorable one for all members of '37. With the success of our initial major effort, there appears no doubt that a banner year is in store for all. Every member of the Class will receive a complete schedule of the events, dates and details within a short time. Early reservations will assist the Committee in planning the events, and the cooperation of all is requested. Since the last issue of Alumni News, word has reached us of the sudden passing of BILL ECCLES, whose death during 1960 was not previously reported. OSCAR GILMAN, outstanding guard on the football teams of the Dobie era died at Providence, R. I., on November 9, 1961. Oscar leaves a wife and three sons. We also have just received word of the recent death of CHARLIE MALONE, formerly of Jamaica Plain, Mass. The sympathy of all the members of the Class is extended to the families of all three of our classmates mentioned above.

Correspondence as a result of our preparation for the reunion dinner brought us news from some of the members of the Class from whom we had not heard for a long time. FRANK P. CROWLEY promises that he will attend as many reunion functions as possible. Frank is now Chief of the Bureau of Fleet Management in the Executive Department of the State of New York, and resides at 487 Stratton Place, Delmar, New York. JIM DUNN is Senior Patent Counsel for the American Cyanimid Company at Stamford, Conn., and he has a son, a sophomore at B.C. Jim intends to attend all of the functions in June. ED HART, formerly of Auburn, N.Y., writes from 5 E. Rosemont Circle, Glen Farms, Newark, Delaware, that he will be in attendance in June. Among classmates who have sons at Boston College are PETE MURPHY, whose son is a junior at the Heights, and TEDDY GLYNN, whose son, Ted, Jr., is a freshman. Daughters of B.C. men are still attending Emmanuel and Regis, as evidenced by the fact that Mother Mary Ellen R.C.E., who is assigned to Jean D'Arc Academy, Milton, is studying at Emmanuel College, where she has met with Mary Jo Murray, daughter of Joe, a freshman at Emmanuel. GEORGE CURTIN'S daughter, Susan, is a sophomore at Regis College in Weston.

Among classmates interested in charitable and civic affairs are BEN HINES of the New Haven Railroad, who is Director of the Greater Boston Commercial Division of the United Fund, with responsibility for 250 companies in the Greater Boston area. JOHN T. GALVIN, World Trade Center Director, is Chairman of the Division of Commerce and Industry for the United Fund.

Congratulations to JIM NOLAN, who has just completed 20 years as Senior Specialist for the Retail Credit Company, in Boston. Among members of the Class who came from the greatest distances to attend the reunion dinner on the 30th were JIM BONNER from New Haven, Conn., ANDY DOMINICK from Manchester, N.H., JOHN KEARY from Fair Haven, Mass. For any information in connection with the 25th reunion activities members of the Class should communicate with General Chairman TEDDY GLYNN, Class Secretary, ANGELO DI MATTIA, Class Treasurer, THOMAS E. GAQUIN, or the chairmen of the individual affairs.

'39 THOMAS F. TURNAN 6 Johnson Rd., Arlington 74.

Among recipients of honors recently conferred by His Holiness, Pope John XXIII, was Very Reverend GEORGE N. WHITTAKER. His investiture as Papal Chamberlain took place at St. Mary's Cathedral, Ogdensburg, N.Y., in November. REV. JOHN V. DRISCOLL, S.J., Dean of The School of Social Work, was named by Gov. Volpe to a Special Commission to survey the Mass. Public Welfare Dept.

Genial JAN KOZLOWSKI, whose achievements began 24 years ago with his appointment as a Tennessee Colonel for retrieving two youngsters from a burning barn, has lately been awarded a plaque by the New England Football Officials Association in recognition of his fine job as president. Jan is also active in Eastern Intercollegiate baseball and has worked the Harvard-Yale game for the past eight years. He is living now in Waban and stays in shape by keeping track of his three boys and two girls.

When it comes to padding out this communique we can always say JOE McCARTHY has another book or story going. His latest concerns the life and times of Jimmie Durante, in Holiday Magazine. In New Haven PAUL NAGLE thinks the odds are even with the arrival of his fourth daughter to match four boys. HERB CHERNACK of the Chicago B.C. Club extended the glad hand to several Thirty-Niners at the Northwestern game, among them FR. PAUL GALLIVAN, now Co-Chairman of the Graduate Athletic Board, BILL FLYNN, Director of Athletics, ED HALL and PHIL QUINN. Correspondence addressed to FRANK CUDDY now reads "Associate Commissioner of Assessing, City Hall, Boston." Cmdr. HARRY LYNCH is Executive Officer of the Coast Guard Training Station, Yorktown, Virginia. FR. AL. PALLADINO has joined the Book Reviewers for the Boston Pilot. LEO CAPLICE has joined Dunn Engineering Corp., Cambridge, as personnel manager.

JOHN BANE is making a name as one of the more successful high school coaches and officials on the South Shore.

JOHN BOWES is currently teaching high school in Long Island, New York.

BILL BREWIN has built a flourishing law practice in his home town of Marlboro.

MARTY CAREW is one of the oldtimers at Hornblower & Weeks.

When last heard from WALTER CLEAR was employed by Boeing Aircraft in Seattle.

BILL CLERKIN heads one of Boston's busiest contracting firms.

WALT DUBZINSKI, football coach at Gardner High, has his son presently emulating his father's deeds at the Heights.

Among those seen at the Cross game were PAUL TRUE, BO O'BRIEN, Dr. GEORGE TULLY, BILL EVERETT, FRANK GALVANI, LARRY CONNORS and ELMER ROSS.

ELMER, by the way, is president of T. C. Ashley & Co. He tells us his firm has recently bought Sessions Gifford Co., a heavy chemicals distributor.

JOHN KEHOE was still hobbling around on crutches at Christmas as a result of a broken leg suffered while on vacation last summer.

Bumped into JOHN KELLY in town one day. KEL is assistant principal of Rochambeau, Jr. High in Dorchester.

CHET GLADCHUCK led the University of Massachusetts eleven through another successful season this past fall.

Congratulations to BOB GALLAGHER, '41's newest newlywed.

FR. JOHN KINCHLA is leading a busy life these days as director of the Youth Service Bureau of the Archdiocese.

LT. COL. BILL ROONEY is a Psychiatric Social Worker in the U. S. Army Hospital at the U. S. Military Academy. He and his wife, Elizabeth, now have seven children.

Congratulations to WALTER CUENIN recently promoted to Colonel in the U.S.M.C.

The 20th Anniversary year was opened by a dinner on Saturday, Nov. 4, 1961 at Hugo-Kimball's Lighthouse, Cohasset. The Committee was headed by JIM O'CONNOR, ED McCORMACK, FRANK DEVER and JOHN MITCHELL. In attendance were: MR. and MRS. ARTHUR CURRY, MR. and MRS. ANDY CLAUS, MR. and MRS. JIM CRONIN, MR. and MRS. FRANK DEVER, MR. and MRS. BOB DUNN, MR. and MRS. JOHN GIBBONS, MR. and MRS. DICK GRAINGER, MR. and MRS. TOM McDONALD, MR. and MRS. JOHN MITCHELL, MR. and MRS. FRANK MURPHY, MR. and MRS. HOWARD MURRAY, MR. and MRS. JIM O'CONNOR, MR. and MRS. JIM REILLY and MR. and MRS. JOHN SULLIVAN.

We are pleased to announce that Andy CLAUS has recently been appointed a partner in the firm of Arthur Young & Co.

GERRY ARMITAGE has been promoted to Col. USMC.

In a letter recently received by FRANK MURPHY from Nancy Keefe, widow of our late beloved classmate, Fred Keefe, was contained the following paragraph:

"You would be amazed if you knew how many of the boys of CBA '42 have written to me and sent Masses to Fred. I really don't even remember having met some of the fellows, but their letters and remembrances mean a great deal to me. I guess its to be expected since I vividly remember conversations between you and Fred with the final summation adding up to 'there'll never be another class equal to CBA, '42!' Now I know that you were right!"

Congratulations to FR. DAN BARRETT and JIM COLLINS who were responsible for the very fine Communion Breakfast on Homecoming Day. FR. DEWIRE said the Mass and among the many in attendance were: BILL DUGGAN from Syracuse, BRIAN SULLIVAN, CLEM HASENFUS

Next year begins our 20th Anniversary celebration! Don't forget your Class dues: $3.00 payable to "B.C. '43" sent to Tom Murray at Alumni Hall will take care of this detail.

Among some of the men seen at our November Dance who have not been around for quite some time were TOM CURRY who has recently returned from Baltimore where he served as counsel for the Baltimore Transit for seven years. Tom is now Vice-President and General Manager of the Eastern Massachusetts Mutual Insurance Company and Assistant to the President of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company. AL (STUMPY) FIORENTINO who came up from his Touchdown Club in Washington . . . also PAT CAPRIO, CARL LUCAS, ART PARNELL and BILL DINI were among those who were most welcome after years of absence from Class affairs.

WALLY BOUDREAU reports a visit from ROCCO CANALE after the Villanova Game. Rocco tells of escaping serious injury following an auto accident due to the quick thinking of his eldest son . . . Congratulations of the Class to MIKE HOLOVAK who has done a wonderful job with the Boston Patriots since taking over as head coach . . . While visiting Chicago to see the Northwestern Game (?) ran into FRANK MAHONEY, busily engaged in law practice in Freeport, Illinois. Frank has been active in local affairs, and although in his words he has "1 wife, 1 child, 1 dog, 1 house, 1 car, 1 office, 1 secretary, 1 mortgage," he has been past Grand Knight, Freeport K. of C., was county chairman during last election of "Citizens for Kennedy" and is presently District Deputy, K. of C. . . . Odds and ends gleaned from dues returns: JACK WHELAN now teaching at Framingham High School . . . FRANK CONROY, present controller at Contronics Inc., in Boston recently moved into a new home in West Roxbury . . . JOHN NORTON one of the most traveled members of the class, is now Chief of the College Promotion Department, Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation in Louisville, Kentucky. After spending quite some time in Hawaii, John recently completed a course on International Business in England and spent seven weeks on the Continent . . . ED GREENLAW is at the main office of the Chevrolet Division, GM, in Detroit . . . JOHN STEWART has been appointed administrator of St. Raphael's Hospital, New Haven, Connecticut . . . Among the many working towards the success of the 100th Anniversary Development Program at the recent meeting of General alumni phase were ED MYERS, PAUL HEALY, BERNIE O'NEIL, JOHN DAY and TAYLOR AHERN . . . JOHN LOGUE is Vice-Chairman in the Corporations Division . . . ED KENNEY has a new title "Mr. Mayor" of Ocala, Florida. The Assistant Red Sox Farm Director is making arrangements for the Sox Minor league teams to train there this Spring . . . '43 men who aided the Alumni Association in the Career Counseling Program were LARRY BABINE, President of Howley-White Associates, ED MCGILVER of H. J. Dowd Co., TOM KENNEDY of his own insurance firm, and SAM LOSCOCO, Executive Vice-President of Universal Food Systems, and TOM MANNING of the F.B.I. . . . Arthur Murray's Boston Manager, HECTOR ALEXANDER has been quoted in the press "I can teach you the Twist over the telephone" . . . other new faces at the November Dance were ERNIE SANTOSUOSSO, copy editor, Globe Sports desk, JOHN FLYNN and JIM (J.) CONNOLLY of N. E. Tel & Tel. in Springfield . . . Door prize winners at the dance were TOM ANTICO and JIM NOWLAND, who came up with BOB WINKLER from Rhode Island . . . other CBA men who enjoyed the affair were JIM GRIMES, ED SMITH, PAUL HEALY, JACK FOYNES and his guest SAL MUSCO. Congratulations and thanks again go to ED DIVVER, and DICK SCHOENFELD for their work at the door and to BOB GALLIGAN for his fine dance reminder notice . . . Just before going to press, we received news that YALE RICHMOND has been transferred from the Embassy in Warsaw to the American Embassy in Vienna, Austria.

'44 HENRY BRASH, CBA
51 Parker Rd., Needham
Homecoming Day was rather eventful for sons of the class—MICHAEL SPATOLA, son of TINO and GIL BOULEY, JR., son of GIL won punting competition of their respective classes.

Since we last reported, RAY and Mary Agnes HOLLAND welcomed aboard a new addition, Barry—this is the ninth in the Holland household. BILL and Ruth CORKEY had their fifth boy making the family number six. BILL MCCARTHY now has his third and second boy. Your reporter now has four boys, newest one is Mark.

The wire tells us that BOB MOORE has started his own business out Chicago way.

Congratulations to BILL KELLEY on receiving his M.B.A. from Alma Mater last June.

The prayers of the class are requested for the father of BOB LEARY. Also our classmate HARRY MCGRATH. HARRY passed away suddenly in November leaving his wife, Virginia, a family of three girls and his parents.

ED FINIGAN of Concord recently won a K. of C. drawing on a trip to Bermuda this winter. Ed is in his own construction business and has made great headway in the past few years. He built the Treadway Motel in Harvard Square, several shopping markets and is currently the general contractor on a church being erected in this diocese. In the last issue of the Alumni News we mentioned that AL TIERNEY was in the candle business in Somerville and JACK BRENNAN in his own real estate business. Since that time the Herald-Traveler had a feature article on Al's unique operation and I also saw a picture of Jack in the Sunday Herald breaking ground on a large industrial development that his firm has undertaken in Cambridge. FR. PAT KELLY who was due out of the service had his Navy tour as chaplain extended because of the service buildup and is enroute back to Japan. He expects to meet several B.C. Alumni chaplains in the Far East and is scheduled for a retreat with FR. COWHIG at Okinawa in December. Time flies. JACK CURRY, Jr. will be playing hockey for B. C. High this year and will be playing against Tim and Robert Cronin who are at St. Sebastian's. T. X. has three boys now at the school and is president of the St. Sebastian's Fathers' Club. Your correspondent was Chairman of the Regional Conferment of Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriters held in Boston this year. Rev. Fr. W. Seavey Joyce gave the invocation at the Conferment Luncheon. Please send us some news. . . . I had to scrape the bottom of the barrel and talk about me this time.

WALLY BURGESS, who is married and living in Brookline, was recently promoted to Management Consulting Services Manager of the Northeast Region for Lybrand, Ross Brothers and Montgomery. Also recently promoted was GERALD M. GALLIGAN who is with the Barnstead Still and Sterilizer Company. Gerry is living in Canton, is married and the proud father of four children. Congratulations to both Wally and Gerry and best wishes for every success in their new positions.

U. S. Congressman from the First Congressional District is our own SILVIO O. CONTE. Silvio also practices law in the City of Pittsfield where he makes his home with his wife and four children. He is a member of the Federal Bar, a Director of the Massachusetts Republican Club and past president of the Berkshire County Alumni Club of Boston College.

Congratulations to the WILLIAM HARNES on the recent arrival of their sixth child, a son, Gregory Mark.

Field Underwriter for the Home Life Insurance Company is WILLIAM E. COSGROVE. Bill makes his home in Danvers, is married and the father of four children.

Your other correspondent, ROBERT CURRAN, is Administrative Assistant to the Director of the Boston City Hospital. Bob received his Master's Degree in Hospital Administration from the University of Minnesota.

Some of our classmates in the teaching profession are HERBERT A. DOERFLER in Springfield; J. PAUL FITZGIBBON, Newton College of the Sacred Heart; JOHN J. GEARIN, Boston Latin School;

Many thanks to our Anniversary Class Committee for arranging the Christmas reunion. From mail reports it was another real great show. For those who missed the opening event of our 5th year celebration, jump on the bandwagon for the rest of the festivities. Watch for the notices which will be sent out shortly concerning a pre-hockey game cocktail party in February, the Alumni Communion Breakfast in April, a dinner dance in May, and a golf tournament and Alumni Day in June. Help the committee in preparing these events by dropping a line to your class officers and give them your ideas.

Speaking of our golf tournament, word has it that JOE MOYLAN, ED COAKLEY and CHARLIE FOX were seen teeing off at Brae Burn in the snow over the holidays. So—competition should be real tough.

ED COLLINS called a while back to let us know he is still in the vicinity. Our V.P. is continuing his doctoral studies at Harvard as a Woodrow Wilson Fellow. He is also the very proud father of a baby girl.

Had a nice card from Dick, Peg, Bill and RICK DOWLING during the holidays. They have been living in Waterbury, Conn. while DICK is training for sales with Anacanda Metal Hose Co. JIM McALOON is also in the same program. Dick also informs me that "JOCO" COLLINS is now Brother Mark and is located at St. Joseph's Novitiate in Newton Highlands. Joco left his teaching post in Somerville about two years ago and joined the Xavarian Brothers.

At a teacher's convention a while back I bumped into BILL CULLINANE and LOUIS SARDELLA. Lou is teaching and coaching in Wakefield. Bill is head of the History Dept. at the new Townsend-Pepperell Regional High School.

Add DON BROWN to the list of '57 who have received their Ph.D's. Don recently was awarded his from Tufts University. That makes four now. Any others? JIM FRAME, now with Upjohn Pharmaceutical Co., tells me that he sees quite a few of the M. D.'s from our class. DR. JOHN RYAN and DR. FRANK MASCARILLO are at St. Elizabeth's, while DR. AL GALLITANO is at Boston City. JIM LAWLESS is reportedly doing very well at Harvard Business School. JIM COSTELLO is in the overseas office of Colgate Palmolive Co., in Germany. Does anybody ever hear from PAUL BROWN, ED BUCKLEY, ED THOMAS, WALTER DIEHL? Congratulations to JAY and JOAN CRONIN on the arrival of their baby girl, KERIN. The CRONIN's will soon be moving into their new home in Needham Heights. JIM and CELIA DOHERTY have announced the birth of their first child, a girl, Deidre Marie. From Houston, Texas comes word that CHARLIE and MARIE ZIELINSKI and their three month old daughter BRENDA ANN are all well. CHARLIE is the Director of Athletics at the new Jesuit Prep School there. If you are up in the Framingham area, drop in at 56 Franklin St., and visit JOE DONOVAN. JOE is President of the Leo-Allen, Inc., which specializes in the sales and service of office equipment. PAUL J. O'LEARY is now associated with the Edmand's Coffee Co., in Boston. LOUIS BATASSI is the latest member of the class to pass the Massachusetts Bar. Lou was sworn in this past fall after graduating from B. C. Law School. Congratulations to FRANK FLAHERTY on his recent engagement to MAUREEN GILL. A summer wedding is planned. RICHARD BLUTE and CAROL ANNE GUINAZZO are formulating wedding plans for October. We also hear that CARNEY DANIELS will be taking the big step in the near future. As one can see the number of bachelors in the class of 1957 continues to shrink.

The Class extends its sympathy to the family of CHUCK LYNCH on the recent death of his father.

This past Fall your CBA correspondent and wife, Jane, had two happy events. On October 9th our second son, "Little Joe" was born, our older son, Jimmy, is 1½ years old. And on November 9th we moved into our new home in Revere.

FRANK DERKSMEIER and his wife, Sheila, are the proud parents of their first son.

VIN and Carol LOONEY are the proud parents of a baby boy, Vincent James III, born Nov. 4th.

Congratulations to DICK and Delores ALLEN on their recent wedding.

FRANK LYNCH is now associated with Home Life Ins. Co. Frank and his wife recently purchased a home in West Roxbury.

We hear that NEIL FITZGERALD is getting ready to take that "big step." Congratulations and best of luck to a great guy!

JACK KELLIHER and WALTER MURPHY are both at B.C. Graduate School.

GERRY KELLY is in the Maryknoll Seminary at Glenn Ellen, Ill.

JOE FAHY, S.J., is now attending M.I.T.

The Class of '57 should be quite proud of the new Prof. at the Heights, Mr. DAVID DRINKWATER.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. JOHN MALLOY on the birth of their twin daughters, Jean and Jane. Mrs. Malloy is the former Pat Hennessey.

From Hazardville, Conn., we hear that PAUL and Maureen CHAMBERLAIN now have four children. PAUL is now a supervisor in the Pension Sales Dept. of AETNA Life Ins. Co. How many remember PAUL's bachelor party?

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. JOE LYONS who were married last November 4th. JOE is with Howes Leather.

Mr. and Mrs. TOM McQUILLAN had a second daughter, Jane, born last Aug. 15.

Mr. and Mrs. JIM MARTIN have one son. JIM is with AETNA Casualty & Surety Co.

ED and Betsy BRICKLEY are living in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

We hear that the seminars on "Ethical Problems in Business" being conducted at the Heights are quite a success.

TOM WHEELAN received his master's from Babson Institute last June. After a nine week tour of Europe, Tom went with G. E. in Burlington, Vt. on a three year training program.

Congratulations to JIM DALY on his recent election to President of the young adults section of the National Council of Catholic Youth Organization. JIM is a fifth grade teacher at the William Lloyd Garrison School in Roxbury.

As the final returns continue to pour in, winter finds the class of '61 for the most part busy with school and career. In addition to those mentioned in the Fall issue, FRANK CAHILL, PHIL CALLAN JR., MAURICE FORD, BOB HAZARD, TOM MUNDY JR., and DICK SULLIVAN are all recovering from the mid-year exam period at BC Law. Up on the hill, DAVE SULLIVAN, ART FITZGERALD, DENIS HARRINGTON, JOHN AHEARN, BILL SNOW, DICK JOHNSON, and JOHN V. DONOVAN are enrolled in the A&S Grad School. VINNIE CANNISTRARO is continuing his study toward an M.A. in English at BC while JOHN CORCORAN, CLAUDE MAZZOLA, TONY LATORELLA, PAUL CRANDELL, DENIS BRIAND, ROBERT LOONEY, TOM SHEEHAN, and BOB DALEY round out the large contingent pursuing graduate degrees at the Heights.

JAMES L. McLAUGHLIN left U.S. shores for Paris in mid-August and is enrolled in the Oriental Studies program at the Sorbonne.

JOHN E. JOYCE is working for the Purchasing Dept. of Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Co. in Hartford, Conn. and is already beginning to talk about a possible class reunion after next year's Cross game.

GERRY ANESKEWICH enters the Army this month for eight weeks training at the Artillery School, Ft. Sill, Okla. and has worked in the general contracting business in New Jersey with his father since graduation.

ANDREW ALOISI is enrolled at the Boston University Law School.

JOHN V. GAVIN is serving out his hitch in the Navy as an instructor of physics at the Nuclear Power School, U.S. Naval Submarine Base, Groton, Conn.

TOM HEFFERNAN slipped out of Boston under cover of darkness October 6th bound for Ireland on the "Mauritania." He apparently found the staid British a better balance for his garrulous personality, however, and is hard at work contrasting the poetry of Ezra Pound and William Butler Yeats for his M.A. thesis at the University of Manchester, England.

KEN HOLLAND graduates from Quartermaster School, Ft. Lee, Virginia on March 16th, plans to take a few weeks leave, and then sail for Korea from California on April 13th.

HARRY KEMP and TOM DOW have joined JACK KEANE at the University of Vermont Med School and at last reports were "up to their armpits in embalming fluid."

BOB DALTON was married Thanksgiving weekend after completing four months of OCS training at Newport and DAVE KIRBY was commissioned in the Marines on the 16th of December at Quantico, Virginia. Just a few miles north in Washington PHIL CARUSO and BOB LEVES-

The Alumni

QUE are at the Georgetown Univ. Dental School while BOB McNAMARA is enrolled at the School of Medicine.

VINCENT D. FOLEY is working as a purchasing coordinator for RCA.

ROBERT COAN, now living in Cambridge, has enrolled in the Master of Arts in Teaching program at the Harvard Graduate School of Education and married Margaret J. Foley (Emmanuel '60) on June 24. They are expecting a child in April.

WILLIAM MANNING's wife had her second daughter in November and Bill is continuing his job as a Research Chemist at Eastman Kodak in Rochester.

BILL HEALY is specializing in zoology at the University of Michigan and is shooting for a Ph.D. He has obtained a research assistantship in the University's Museum of Zoology and intends to do experimental research on reptiles and amphibians.

Running through the names of those spending time in the service finds TOM DAHONEY, JOHN C. LEARY, JIM CROWLEY, and JOHN DeSALVO all at Camp Lejeune; JOHN G. DONOVAN in the Coast Guard, KEVIN COLLINS at Ft. Sill; JOHN LYNCH and KEVIN DONOGHUE, Ft. Benning, Georgia; BILL KINGSBURY, OCS, Newport; and JOHN NORTON at Ft. Knox.

Your authors would appreciate having alumni of the class of 1961, send to them the names of a few of your acquaintances and what they are presently doing, their marital status, where they are now located and other interesting items. This is the only way we can keep in contact with the class. Anything you can contribute will be sincerely appreciated. Just forward the information to the address of your respective correspondent at the beginning of this column.

the BEST TEST....

— of a food store's values is the saving on your TOTAL food bill. That's the thinking behind A&P's policy of more low prices on more items . . . more days of the week.

A&P's customers know that this is the one sure way to cut total food bills. After all, a few specials once in a while do not keep down a run-away budget. It's A&P's tremendous flock of low prices all the time that really do the trick.

Come test-shop A&P yourself. We know you'll sing about the savings on the total food bill!
